Ickes Sees Hope of More Gasoline for Civilian Use

Prospect of Ban On Pleasure Riding Being Lifted Is Found in Statement

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The Petroleum Administration yesterday lifted the pall of gloom which customarily envelopes its statements on petroleum supply; Administrator Harold L. Ickes promising "a somewhat larger supply of gasoline for civilian use in the East" and Deputy Administrator Ralph K. Davies predicting the rationed States would get heating oil "on a level at least equal to that of last winter."

Although, technically, the Petroleum Administration has no responsibility with respect to the manner in which the rationed allotment of gasoline is used, informed observers viewed the optimistic statements as a forecast of the lifting of the pleasure driving ban in the near future.

Ickes' comment was hedged with characteristic caution, although the meaning of the statement was clear.

"Always subject, of course, to unexpected setbacks and to sudden large military demands," he said, "I think that it can be said positively that we shall soon arrive at the point where we can make available a somewhat larger supply of gasoline for civilian use in the East, while at the same time allowing for the necessary build-up of heating oil stocks against next winter's demand."

The Petroleum Administration's weekly supply bulletin recorded a two-tenths of a per cent rise in stocks to 35.2 per cent of normal—marking "a continuation of the slow but steady build-up of the East's inventory position."

Davies made the following statement on heating oil:

"As of today, it appears that we shall be able to supply heating oil in the rationed States next winter on a level at least equal to that

Coffee Rationing Over, Roosevelt Announces

Coffee rationing ends today.

President Roosevelt said in his radio address last night that "tonight we are able to terminate the rationing of coffee," and in a joint statement issued later the War Food Administration and the Office of Price Administration said that henceforth "purchases and sales of coffee may be made at all trade and consumer levels without the surrender or collection of coffee ration stamps or other ration currency."

"Improved shipping conditions," due to successful combatting of submarines in the Caribbean have put the Nation's stocks of green coffee "at a satisfactory level."

Hamburg Riddled Anew

U. S. Bombers Bag 60 Fighters; 23 'Forts' Lost in German Raid

By the Associated Press

London, July 28.—Flying Fortresses penetrated deeper into Germany than ever before today to shatter a plane factory at Oschersleben, 80 miles southwest of Berlin, after British night raiders had cast the greatest bomb load in history on the tortured submarine center of Hamburg in the sixth Allied raid there in three days.

And late tonight there appeared to be no sign of a let-up in the aerial assault on Hitler's Europe as great waves of heavy bombers thundered from the southeast coast over the English Channel. (The Federal Communications Commission reported the Nazi-run Calais and Paris radios in France had gone off the air.)

Meanwhile, a high-flying plane caused a brief alert in London.

The great American bombers also battered a German plane factory at Kassel and destroyed more than 60 Nazi fighters in furious battles in which 23 heavy bombers and one Allied fighter were lost. This brought to at least 42 the total of Allied planes lost in the day and night assaults.

United States medium bombers attacked industrial targets in Belgium, and British fighters seared German air bases in northern France and Belgium as the sustained day-and-night aerial offensive rose to a new pitch of shattering intensity.

The Air Ministry said "just over" 2300 long tons (2576 U. S. tons) of bombs were loosed upon blazing Hamburg last night, shattering the violent world record set by the R. A. F. on Saturday night.

The ministry reported that more than 500 tons had fallen in the current bombing cycle on continental Europe's greatest port.

The first central German target of the Flying Fortresses was an aircraft assembly plant at Oschersleben near Magdeburg, which lies 460 miles east of the nearest bit of English coastline. The Fortresses flew at least 335 miles over Hitler's vaunted "European Fortress" to deliver their precision attack and probably spanned more than 1000 miles on the roundtrip.

"Bomb bursts were seen in both target areas," a joint U. S. and British communique said of the attacks on Oschersleben and Kassel.

The Fortresses flew without escort—their incursion was too deep for fighters—and encountered "large numbers of fighters." Escorts of U. S. Thunderbolts, British,

Grave Disorders, Bordering on Revolt, Said to Sweep Milan

By the Associated Press

London, July 28.—Violent fighting has broken out between Italian and German troops in northern Italy, according to reports seeping out of the war-weary land of fallen fascism, where grave disorders bordering on outright revolution were said to be sweeping Milan.

Accounts reaching Madrid said active Italian military resistance in the north at Milan and Turin was blocking a German attempt to pour ten divisions into a line along the Po River, where the Germans were believed to have established a defense system in betrayal of a pledge to Marshal Badoglio to help hold all Italy.

A Rome spokesman in a closely censored telephone conversation with Bern, Switzerland, declined to confirm or deny that Italy had already asked for an armistice.

Milan Workers Leave Jobs

Reports which were not confirmed but which were received in Switzerland from the Italian border said that all workers in Milan had left their jobs and that there was gunfire when the people apparently became uneasy at the delay of the new government of Marshal Pietro Badoglio in making peace.

The Allies still watched for definite indication whether Italy is staying in or getting out of the war.

Among the more promising peace reports was a broadcast from Ankara, recorded here by Reuters news agency, which said:

"News reaching Turkey tonight says the Italian government shows willingness to negotiate with the Allies.

"The main difficulty seems to be the fate of the German divisions in Sicily and southern Italy."

Armed Intervention Reported

The disturbances were said to have been in spite of a state of siege declared by military authorities.

Later, a Swiss radio broadcast, heard here by the Associated Press, said the Milan situation had become worse and "armed forces have intervened."

"Despite interference by the armed forces the workers remain on strike," said this broadcast.

It added that demonstrations in favor of the Soviet Union had taken place and that banks were closed.

Meanwhile, a series of announcements from Rome and reports reaching neighboring countries emphasized the dramatic overturn that had taken place with the collapse of Benito Mussolini's generation of dictatorship.

Fresh Crop of Peace Rumors

The Rome radio announced the dissolution of the Fascist party, and that the new cabinet had abrogated the 14-year-old law by which the Fascist grand council had appropriated the functions of the government. The cabinet also suppressed the special tribunal for defense of the state—the court which had tried political offenders. The tribunal's functions will pass to the army for the duration.

A fresh crop of rumors of preparatory peace moves reached London from neutral capitals, but in Commons Prime Minister Churchill again declared no official reply had been received to the July 16 demand of himself and President Roosevelt for the honorable capitulation of Italy.

As seen in London, Marshal Pietro Badoglio was under heavy two-sided pressure, from the Germans to stay in the fight and from his war-weary people who expected peace.

Dispatches from Istanbul, Turkey, said reports from the Balkans indicated that Italian troops were being evacuated from Albania and Greece, at least in part.

Italians Leave Reich

A spokesman for the Ministry of Economic Warfare said that groups of Italian workers in Germany had been returning home for two months and that about 270,000 out of 350,000 were left in the Reich.

The Ankara radio report of Italy's willingness to negotiate followed a mysterious conference yesterday between Raffaele Guariglia, Badoglio's new Foreign Minister and former envoy to Ankara, and the Turkish Foreign Minister, Numan Menemencioglu, who boarded the Italian Embassy launch for a long talk on the Sea of Marmora.

Later the German radio said President Ismet Inonu had broken off an inspection trip and hurried

Highlights of President's Radio Speech on the War

OUR terms to Italy are still the same as our terms to Germany and Japan—"unconditional surrender."

. . . He (Mussolini) and his Fascist gang will be brought to book. . . . No criminal will be allowed to escape by the expedient of "resignation."

In the Pacific we are pushing the Japs from the Aleutians to New Guinea. There, too, we have taken the initiative—and we are not going to let go of it.

The heaviest and most decisive fighting today is going on in Russia. I am glad that the British and we have been able to contribute somewhat to the striking power of the Russian armies.

YOU have heard it said that while we are succeeding greatly on the fighting front, we are failing miserably on the home front. This is another of those immaturities—a false slogan easy to state but untrue in the essential facts.

One tangible result of our great increase in merchant shipping—which will be good news to civilians at home—is that tonight we are able to terminate the rationing of coffee. We also expect that within a short time we shall get greatly increased allowances of sugar.

Among other things we are, today, laying plans for the return to civilian life of our gallant men and women in the armed services. . . . I have assured our men . . . that the American people would not let them down when the war is won. . . . I hope that Congress will help in carrying out this assurance.

The length of the war will depend upon the uninterrupted continuance of all-out effort on the fighting fronts and here at home. The effort is all one.

The longer this war goes on the clearer it becomes that no one can draw a blue pencil down the middle of a page and call one side "the fighting front" and the other side "the home front." The two of them are inexorably tied together.

We shall not settle for less than total victory. That is the determination of every American on the fighting fronts. That must be, and will be, the determination of every American here at home.

President Hails Fall of Mussolini As First Crack in Axis; Declares 'Unconditional Surrender' Still Only Peace Terms Open to Italy

(Text On Page 10.)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, in a militant speech calling for nothing less than "total victory," last night hailed the drama in Rome as the first crack in the Axis and promised that Mussolini and his Fascist gang would be tried and punished as criminals.

"Our terms to Italy," he said, "are still the same as our terms to Germany and Japan—'unconditional surrender.'"

The President said that Mussolini got out in Rome because he knew the jig was up and because he could see the shadow of the long arm of justice.

"But," he added, "he and his Fascist gang will be brought to book, and punished for their crimes against humanity. No criminal will be allowed to escape by the expedient of 'resignation.'"

Surveying the globe, the President predicted that the Japanese would have to fall back from their Pacific outposts for want of ships and planes.

He said that American production of ships was "almost unbelievable"; took a crack at political foes who criticize his foreign policy as "starry-eyed dreaming," and listed a 6-point plan for helping demobilized soldiers, sailors and marines after the war.

Tells of Rejoicing in Sicily

In talking about Italy, Mr. Roosevelt, unlike Prime Minister Churchill, did not tell that country of the dire things that would happen if she refused to surrender. He said the war against Italy would go on, but he made no threats about devastation. Instead, he told how the people of Sicily were rejoicing over their liberation from fascism.

He said that we would have no truck with Fascism, and that we will "permit no vestige of Fascism to remain." Eventually, he added, the people of Italy will choose their own government in accordance with "basic democratic principles of liberty and equality."

The President, who the day previously had sharply criticized an OWI broadcast which referred to Victor Emmanuel as a "moronic King," did not mention either the King or Marshal Badoglio last night. One passage in his speech may have been aimed at those who criticized his French policy and who now are after the scalps of the King and Badoglio.

Warns Against Easing Pressure

"The United Nations," Mr. Roosevelt said, "are substantially agreed on the general objectives for the postwar world. They are also agreed that this is not the time to engage in an international discussion of all the terms of peace and all the details of the future."

The President underlined the word "all" in both places.

"We must not relax our pressure on the enemy by taking time out to define every boundary and settle every political controversy in every part of the world," the President continued. "The all-important thing now is to get on with the war—and to win it."

But looking to the future, the President pointed to what was hap-

Red Drive Part of Allied Strategy, President Says

The big Russian drive on Orel has been called a counteroffensive, but President Roosevelt disclosed that it was a drive the Red army planned some time ago—and this in coordination with the Allies' whole 1943 offensive strategy. Taunting "that mystic master of strategic intuition, Herr Hitler," the President said:

"The short-lived German offensive, launched early this month, was a desperate attempt to bolster the morale of the German people. The Russians were not fooled by this. They went ahead with their own plans for attack—plans which coordinate with the whole United Nations' offensive strategy."

Italy's Fight Must Go On, Rome Asserts

Relations With Britain Unchanged, Broadcast Declares

By the Associated Press

The Rome Radio in its first detailed exposition of Italy's position following the fall of Benito Mussolini declared last night that, with fascism "abolished," there remains "but one thing for Italy to do—continue to fight—fight for liberty and for honor."

The Italian people, the announcer said in an English language broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, "were at war, and they remain at war."

There has been no change in the relation between Italy and Great Britain, the broadcast said.

"What has happened in Italy is strictly a home affair," it asserted. "Italy has found it necessary to rid herself of a political system which she found harmful to the nation; this political system has been done away with.

"Fascism in Italy is over! Forever!"

Italy is now orderly and united under the leadership of the King and the head of the government, the broadcast said, "and all the Italian people realize that the most

Duce Reported Held in Royal Villa

Madrid, July 28. (AP).—Latest reports said today that Benito Mussolini had been transferred—for his own safey—from a villa on the Ostia Road to the royal villa at Viareggio, between Pisa—20 miles north of Leghorn, on the west side of the top of Italy's boot—and Carrera—40 miles north of Pisa. He is said to be under guard of regular army troops responsible directly to Marshal Badoglio.

Capitol Weighs Sales Tax and Forced Loans

Rep. Robertson Tells Problem Now Facing Law Framers

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Significant feelers on both sales taxes and forced loans were put out at the Capitol yesterday as congressional tax draftsmen sought a revenue detour around another sharp increase in income tax rates.

1. Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia, influential member of the Ways and Means Committee, said in his opinion the people would prefer a sales tax to heightened income tax rates.

2. The Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue taxation, in a published defense of the Victory tax, said the unique 5 per cent levy "affords the best model for a simple compulsory savings program."

Victory Tax Repeal

The joint committee's Victory tax defense followed reports that the Treasury would recommend repeal of the Victory tax, which reaches 12 million low income taxpayers in addition to the 39 million subject to regular income taxes.

Robertson's suggestion that a sales tax would be more popular than drastic upward revision of income levies followed reported

Union Raiding Loophole Seen In Strike Law

Biddle Asked to Decide Nonbargaining Agents' Right to File Notices

The possibility that a union may be able to use the Connally-Smith antistrike law to "raid" the jurisdiction of another union arose yesterday as the National Labor Relations Board asked Attorney General Francis Biddle whether the right to file strike notices under the act was limited to certified bargaining agents.

Since the act was passed 41 strike notices have been filed under it. Nine of the notices have since been withdrawn.

The 30-day "cooling off" period provided by the law is scheduled to expire on August 4 in the dispute at the Springfield (Ill.) plant of the Allis-Chalmers Co., and on August 9 in a Newark (N. J.) laundry. The NLRB has already scheduled a strike vote in Newark for August 9, but has not scheduled any vote in Springfield, pending receipt of Biddle's opinion.

The Springfield dispute arose over the NLRB's refusal to accept a petition for a bargaining election from District 50 of the United Mine Workers on the ground that the C. I. O. Farm Equipment Workers already had a bona fide contract with the Allis-Chalmers firm.

If the United Mine Workers, who have no bargaining rights in the Springfield plant, are permitted to force a strike election, observers

New Munda Attack

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Thursday), July 29 (AP).—Another Japanese warship and at least one transport or cargo vessel have fallen victim to Allied bombers in the southwest Pacific.

The destroyer and transport were sighted by a reconnaissance plane off Cape Gloucester, New Britain. Four-engined bombers were sent to the attack, and direct hits were scored on both ships, despite a protecting cover of Japanese fighters.

"Both ships were left burning fiercely," a communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters said.

Damaging near misses were scored on another cargo ship, a 2500-ton vesel, anchored near the enemy base at Manokwari, Dutch New Guinea.

Another heavy attack was delivered by torpedo and dive bombers against the Munda, New Georgia, airbase. Forty-seven tons of explosives were dropped on enemy positions. There were no reports on the progress of Americans who are closing in on the strategic central Solomons base.

Aerial blows designed to blockade Japanese garrisons from supply points farther north went forward despite Japanese attempts to block them. In one brief battle over Rein Bay on the north coast of New Britain, nine P-38s tangled with 15 Zeros and shot down six and probably destroyed two more. No Allied losses were reported.

The fight occurred during a raid by our medium bombers on a barge base near Rein Bay. Seven barges and two launches were destroyed and explosions followed hits on inland fuel dumps.

Seven barges were destroyed and three others damaged by medium bombers in sweeps along the coast of New Guinea; four were intercepted by surface units off Kolombangra Island in the Solomons and two were sunk.

The oilfield port of Boela, on Dutch New Guinea, was bombed by heavy bombers and hits were scored on oil storage tanks, supply dumps and on the airdrome, causing seven fires. A Japanese transport aircraft was destroyed on the ground at Cape Gloucester.

2500 Nazis Killed

By Lynn Heinzerling
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Thursday), July 29.—More than 2500 Germans fell before the slugging Russian army advancing toward Orel today despite frantic German attempts to plug the crescent-shaped front with tired reserves and hastily shifted armored divisions.

The Russians announced gains of 2½ to 4 miles and the capture of over 30 populated places—including the railway station of Stanovoy Kolodets, 11 miles southeast of Orel, the nerve center of German resistance.

Soviet night bombers aided the land advance as they raided rail junctions at Orel and Bryansk through which Nazi men and supplies for the embattled front were moving. Military trains were hit and enemy airdromes holding large concentrations of German aircraft were attacked, the Moscow radio said.

A Berlin broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, admitted the Soviets were "greatly superior" to the German defenders in men and material but said the Russians were

Post Readers Help Charwomen Losers by Government Error

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Spontaneous offers to contribute to a fund to aid 80 charwomen employed by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing who were overpaid by a clerical error for nearly a year and must now repay the Government from their meager earnings reached The Post yesterday.

Joseph Shannon of the War Production Board sent in a dollar with the suggestion that a "Charwomen's Club" be established. Offers of contributions came from Capitol Hill and Government offices. For the present The Post will hold all funds until the practicability of this movement can be established.

On Monday The Post disclosed that the Treasury Department had discovered that ever since last August, because of a misunderstanding of pay legislation, the bureau had been overpaying charwomen, and was now deducting excess pay from their salaries. The women received 78 cents an hour instead of 65, and are giving back from $50 to $100 deductions ranging from $8 to $9 per month from their pay checks.

A rough estimate of the total sum involved is $5000, which is based on the knowledge that some of the women have been employed by the bureau for a full year, while others have been there a shorter time.

Average monthly check received by these women is $52. Charwomen work only four hours a day during hours when Government offices are closed.

None of these workers was aware she was being overpaid, since the Civil Service papers gave their salary as 78 cents an hour.

One charwoman asserted the deductions were less painful to her because her husband also is employed, but added that many of her fellow workers were widows trying to provide for three or four children. These widows have taken these particular jobs because the unusual hours permitted them to be with their children during the day.

Treasury officials have expressed regret over the situation, since the women already have spent the 13 extra cents an hour they received during the past year, but asserted that the ruling of the Comptroller General must be followed.

OWI Won't Slur Italian King Again, Sherwood Promises

The Office of War Information will refrain from hurling further epithets at the King of Italy in overseas broadcasts, but it will not ignore the fact that he supported the overthrow Fascist regime. Robert Sherwood, director of the OWI overseas branch, told a reporter yesterday after a "policy" conference with Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

The conference was held as the aftermath of an OWI English-language broadcast to Europe which termed Vittorio Emanuele "the moronic little King." President Roosevelt told reporters that the broadcast was unauthorized by Sherwood, the White House and the State Department and should never have been made.

Sherwood said that there would be no change in the method of handling policy questions, but "anything the least bit controversial will be referred to the State Department and the joint chiefs of staff."

Policy with respect to the present Badoglio government in Italy was canvassed at the conference, Sherwood said, with the understanding that OWI must operate on "an hour to hour basis" as events shape up.

In addition to Hull and Sherwood, the conference was attended by Milton Eisenhower, acting director of OWI; James P. Warburg, director of OWI's overseas service in New York City; Michael McDermott, press relations chief of the State Department, and Robert Pell, State Department liaison officer.

Asked about policy in the immediate future toward the King of Italy, Sherwood said.

"No epithets, but no blinking the fact that he supported the Fascists and did not kick out Mussolini until it became apparent that he would not get any more help from Hitler."

With respect to Marshal Pietro Badoglio, the new Italian premier, the OWI "line" will be to:

"Make no secret of his Fascist identification—not say he is an anti-Fascist."

The Italian government:

"We will remember that it is government of a nation with

6 More Towns Fall In U. S. Sicily Drive

Germans' Newly Fortified Etna Line Faces Threat on San Stefano Flank

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 28.—Six more important Sicilian towns and a host of villages have fallen to American columns driving irresistibly against the newly-fortified flank of the German Etna line at San Stefano, it was announced today as Hitler gambled some of his best troops on a chance of keeping Italy in the war.

Cefalu—90 miles west of Messina—was captured Monday by Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr.'s hard-fisted infantry and armored crews, and became a new North coast base for the advance on San Stefano 17 miles away.

A belated official announcement also said the Americans had taken the inland communication points of Collesano, Petralia, Calteveturo, Polizzia and Alimena—representing an additional occupied area of more than 200 square miles.

Foe Brings New Troops

Alimena is 25 miles southeast of Cefalu, putting the Americans within 16 miles of Nicosia, a main inland base of the Etna Line.

All official reports released by headquarters said the Germans were frantically bringing fresh troops and equipment into Sicily, and messages from Europe described German reserves being rushed to Italy through the Brenner Pass from the Reich.

These reports, if true, indicated the German high command at last was committed to full-fledged defense of Italy's territory despite the danger of Italy suing for separate peace.

Three and a half divisions of some of Hitler's best troops are arrayed on the Etna Line from San Stefano in the north to Catania in the east, and they undertook full responsibility from the Italians for the fate of the Messina bridgehead.

Italian Soldiers Toil

Like military serfs, the Italians were put to pick and shovel labor, excavating entrenchments, erecting tank blocks across roads, and sandbagging German field guns. Only a relative handful of Mussolini's ill-famed "eight million bayonets" still was permitted to handle weapons in combat. Survivors of the Livorno Division and another unidentified Italian field division sank to the class of menials.

San Stefano loomed ahead of the Americans as importantly as Hill 609 whose capture split the Axis front in northern Tunisia. Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, the canny Missourian who outsmarted the Nazis at Hill 609, is commanding one of Patton's Corps in the Messina push.

A vital north-south road runs from San Stefano to Nicosia, key to the central sector where Americans and Canadians are fighting. Once the Americans get into San Stefano, the Axis would be compelled to pull back probably 20 miles overnight and Nicosia would be gravely outflanked.

British Still Stymied

Canadian troops in the central sector hacked deeper into the Germans' mountain defenses, today's communique said, but the British Eighth Army was stymied for the thirteenth day outside Catania by minefields and German artillery commanding the plains.

The Canadians apparently are fighting near Agira, central pivot of the Axis defense arc, and only 16 miles from Allied-held Enna.

More prisoners, in undisclosed numbers, have been taken, the communique reported, but it was officially disclosed that "the bulk of two Italian field divisions" escaped from western Sicily.

This apparently would reduce previous official estimates that 110,000 Axis troops had been trapped. The latest report listed "over 70,000" enemy soldiers in Allied prison pens.

Dominating the air, Allied planes still were hammering mainly at Axis island communications and at airdromes and ports in Sicily and the mainland.

Flying Fortresses pounded Capua airfield north of Naples and hit railroad yards at Lioni and Calitri, knocking down three enemy fighters.

Planes Hammer Air Bases

New destruction was piled over southern Italy areas, with American Mitchells and Marauders bombing Scalea airfield on the Italian "toe" and destroying 20 grounded planes, and R. A. F. and Canadian Wellingtons hitting Monte Corvino Ravelle airdrome by night. From Mid-East bases, R. A. F. Liberators and Halifaxes hammered the airfield at Reggio Calabria Monday night.

In Sicily, the Port of Milazzo, German reinforcement funnel, 20 miles west of Messina, was attacked nine times by R. A. F. Bostons and Baltimores. Fighter-bombers raided communications at Milazzo, Francavilla.

The day's operations cost three Allied planes, with five enemy ships shot down.

Americans Push Ahead

back to Ankara, apparently to meet Menemencioglu.

The Rome radio frequently interrupted its programs with appeals to the populace not to believe wild rumors.

The chief of OVRA, Mussolini's secret police chief, was reported a casualty of early Monday demonstrations, and the head of Stefani, Mussolini's news agency, was reported a suicide.

Italian Fascist Party branches in Spain were closed.

Peace Demands Shouted

Bern, Switzerland, July 28 (AP).—Gun battles with Fascist remnants holding women and children as hostages, rising peace calls, bloodshed, and strikes bordering on civil war were reported tonight sweeping Milan and other Italian cities.

In Milan, workers rushed from factories to join women and children in mobs crying "we want peace." Some shots were fired but most of the troops refused official orders from Rome to use such means to break up the surging crowds.

Regular army troops moving against nests of Fascist resistance in Milan now are using tanks.

Vito Mussolini, nephew of the ousted Il Duce and director of the defunct Fascist newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, was reported among 70 Fascists who barricaded themselves—along with women and children as hostages—at Il Covo, the birthplace of Fascism.

Soldiers, civilians, and Fascists were among those killed in today's rioting and gun clashes.

Members of the Socialist, Communist, and other liberal parties in Milan spent the entire day making anti-Fascist speeches in public squares—despite military orders against public assemblies.

Several Killed in Naples

Several persons also were reported killed in Naples.

Rome's announcement that the Fascist Party had been dissolved apparently had not lessened the clamor in Milan for the heads of Fascist ringleaders.

The Corriere della Serra in Milan said the situation was grave, that workers had refused to resume their jobs. Banks were closed. Many factories were unable to pay workers' salaries, increasing the tension.

Extremists, including Communists, were reported feeding the fires of agitation.

Peace demonstrations also occurred in Trieste, Venice and Turin in northern Italy and in Bari, Taranto, Naples and other southern cities.

The Gazetta del Popolo of Turin appealed to the people that "peace cannot be made in two days," advising them to return to work and remain calm.

Gazetta del Popolo frankly admitted that "if internal order is not maintained the Badoglio government will be obliged to accept a premature armistice."

This was the sharpest hint yet that Badoglio intends eventually to sue for peace on the best possible bargain with the Allies.

"Our goal is peace," the editorial said, "but the enemy, who formerly declared he did not wish to deal with fascism, today demands the unconditional surrender of Italy. . . . We must obey the government lest we risk falling from Fascist tyranny into unsupportable servitude to a foreign occupation."

Travelers from Berlin said increasing gloom had settled on the Germans as the ripening situation in Italy touched off repercussions throughout the Balkans. They quoted some Germans as saying, "This is the beginning . . ."

Sidelights on the War

Nazi Gen. Christiansen Loses Air Command in Netherlands

London, July 28 (AP).—DNB, German news agency, reported today that Gen. Friedrich Christiansen, commander of German military forces in the Netherlands, had been relieved of the command of Nazi air forces in that area in order that he might concentrate on his military duties.

The DNB broadcast said that the change had been made at the suggestion of Reichsmarshal Goering and that General Christiansen would be replaced by Colonel General Keller, at present commander of an air fleet.

Aneta, official Netherlands news agency, carried a Moscow radio report yesterday that General Christiansen had been court-martialled for cowardice. The report, purported to have come from The Hague, said that when British troops recently were rumored to have landed on the Netherlands coast "Christiansen lost his head completely and ordered out his troops without investigating the facts."

Norway's King Optimistic

Liverpool, July 28 (AP).—King Haakon of Norway said in a speech here today that the war outlook is much brighter than it was the first of the year, but that "it might take six months or a year or more before Norwegians can return to Norway.

New French Crisis

Algiers, July 28 (AP).—A new crisis threatened the unity of the French committee of National liberation today, precipitated by Gen. Henri Giraud's objection to a number of actions taken during his absence in the United States and Canada.

Giraud, copresident of the committee with Gen. Charles de Gaulle, was reported to be opposed to a decision to lower the age limit for officers in the armed forces and to a number of appointments in the colonial administration.

Probe Is Asked By Association In Detroit Riots

Detroit, July 28 (AP). — Charges that Detroit police "used the ultimate in force" against Negroes and "persuasion rather than firm action" with white participants in the June 21 race riots were made by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People today.

The association said it had presented to Mayor Edward J. Jeffries a detailed statement of charges of acts by the police department and others. It added that affidavits it has taken in the course of an investigation of the rioting "are more than sufficient to justify calling a special grand jury."

Sen. Taft Charges 'Smear Congress' Campaign Is On

Asserting that if there is any lack of cooperation between the various branches of the Government "it lies on the President's side," Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio charged last night there is a deliberate campaign under way to "smear Congress."

In an address prepared for delivery over the Blue Network, Taft criticized those he said "seem to feel there should be no quarreling on the home front."

Attacks on Congress, he said, comes from "those timorous folk who have been criticizing the Administration, but now shake their heads and regret there has been a battle between Congress and the President."

"Then," he said, "there are those like Henry Wallace, the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the Communists, who picture a group of reactionaries controlled by Wall Street, destroying everything that the President has accomplished on the domestic front in the last 10 years."

Voters Support War Government In South Africa

Pretoria, South Africa, July 28 (AP).—The first results of South Africa's election held July 7 indicated today that South Africa had overwhelmingly supported the war and the prime minister, Field Marshall Jan Christiaan Smuts.

Returns have been delayed because of the necessity of recording the votes of South Africa's soldiers now on the battlefields. Voting had been heavy.

Of 56 seats decided by tonight's count, Smut's prowar coalition government won 54. The antiwar opposition, led by Dr. D. F. Malan, Nationalist Party leader, had only 2. Seventy-four seats were still outstanding. The aggregate vote so far was 276,808 for Smuts, 47,042 for his opponents.

Spirit of Revolt Rises Higher In Smaller European Nations

By Joseph Willicombe, jr.
International News Service Staff Writer

London, July 28.—Europe's smaller countries—belligerent, occupied or neutral—were rocked with increasing intensity tonight by the repercussions of Mussolini's collapse.

Hungary and Bulgaria were reported seeking a way out of the war while a general anti-Axis strike swept Greece.

In Spain a growing monarchist movement was said to be challenging the power of Gen. Francisco Franco.

Ramifications of the Italian upheaval even reached all the way up to Finland, where Parliament, defying a government effort to adjourn the body, adopted a motion demanding that the cabinet present a report on foreign policy before adjournment.

A Berne dispatch to the Stockholm newspaper Allehanda said Bulgaria—where the first crack in the German armor appeared in World War I—was desperately looking for means to extricate herself from the war, fearing that—as in the last conflict—she will be a battleground soon.

In a stormy interview, King Boris was said to have told Premier Bogdan Filoff that Bulgaria's position was "untenable" and that the "tension of the people is such that revolution may break out at any moment."

Persons who have just arrived in Switzerland from Bulgaria were quoted as saying Adolf Hitler had rushed German army and Gestapo reinforcements into Bulgaria to "keep order."

Sabotage Campaign

Bulgarian patriots were reported to have launched a systematic campaign of sabotage.

Hungary also appeared to be scampering for cover. Certain Hungarian diplomats were reported to have arrived at Istanbul, where they began sounding out the Turkish government on whether the latter would serve as an intermediary.

The Hungarians were reported to have offered, in exchange for peace, the restoration to Yugoslavia of the territory Hungary grabbed in 1941 when the Nazis overran the Yugoslav country.

The Hungarian government, which had always leaned more heavily on Italy than on Germany, was reported in diplomatic quarters to have concluded several months ago that there was no chance of Axis victory and therefore Hungary must try to reduce her commitments to Germany. Accordingly, there has been a steady withdrawal of Hungarian troops from the Russian front.

Invasion Barge Found Abandoned

London, July 28 (AP).—An invasion barge loaded with Lockheed interceptor planes found bobbing around without a crew in mid-Atlantic provided the Royal Navy with a mystery today.

The barge was superficially damaged on the nose and had apparently been struck by flying debris, but it was still seaworthy enough to be towed to the Belfast docks. Several empty lifeboats were found near the barge and the occupants had apparently already been picked up.

40th Air Attack By Army Rips Japs on Kiska

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Varied teams of the Army's heavy bombers and speedy fighters poured new destruction on Japanese-held Kiska, while Liberator bombers boosted to 33 the number of defending Japanese Zeros destroyed or damaged in two American attacks on Wake Island within four days, the Navy announced yesterday.

Forty raids by Army planes since Saturday have thrown a fiery mixture of machine gunning and bombs at Kiska. With the 19 new raids announced yesterday, the attacks were handled by a combination of Liberator four-motored bombers, twin-engined Lightnings and Warhawk fighter planes.

Liberators hit anew at Wake on Tuesday, fighting their way through 25 Japanese Zeros, of which seven were destroyed, four were probably destroyed and three others damaged, the Navy said. In a similar raid Saturday the American fliers shot down nine Zeros, damaged five others and probably destroyed four more.

In the Wake Island attack and in the latest series of trip-hammer blows at Kiska, the attacking Army planes struck home at chosen targets. There were no casualties in the Wake Island raid, and a Warhawk pilot forced into the sea near Kiska was rescued by a Navy Catalina patrol bomber, the war bulletin said.

Stepping up the weekend pace of 10 attacks each on Saturday and Sunday, the fighter-bomber teams drove at Kiska 13 times on Monday, and half a dozen times on Tuesday.

The air teams started fires and kicked up explosions on North and South Heads, which form the protecting arms of Kiska Harbor, and on Little Kiska Island which lies across the main harbor's mouth.

The same treatment was given the airplane runway, the bivouac and submarine base sections, and to Gertrude Cove. The latter already had been blasted shortly after midnight on Monday by a single raiding Catalina patrol bomber.

The bombed areas also were hammered by machine-gun fire in a strafing attack on specific targets, the Navy said.

Similar combinations of Liberators, Warhawks and Lightnings returned for the six raids Tuesday, scoring hits in the bivouac area, but the Aleutian Island weather prevented full observation of the attack's effect.

N. J. Governorship Aspiration Denied By Gen. Johnson

San Francisco, July 28 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Robert W. Johnson, chairman of the Smaller War Plants Corporation, said today that under no circumstances would he become a candidate for the governorship of New Jersey or for any other State political office.

The statement was made through Col. F. M. Smith, regional director of the corporation here. Smith said Johnson, who had been on the West Coast for several days, was en route to Washington, D. C., and New York by plane.

Reports were current in Washington that Johnson, chairman of Johnson & Johnson, surgical supply manufacturers, would become a gubernatorial candidate. Johnson is a former Republican whose name has figured in New Jersey Democratic speculation.

Colonel Smith said the general had no statement to make regarding reports that he might be released from the Army for other work.

Italy Not to Get All Holdings Back

London, July 28 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden made it clear today that the Allies would not return to Italy all her North African possessions in event of her "honorable capitulation."

The foreign secretary answered "no sir," when asked concerning this possibility. The question was not raised whether Italy might expect to get back some of her former holdings.

Archbishop Spellman On Way Back to U. S.

The State Department said yesterday that the Most Rev. Francis J. Spellman, Archbishop of New York, who has been abroad for several months, was en route back to the United States today, without intending to visit the Vatican on the way.

Asked about reports that the archbishop was proceeding to the Vatican, the department said he had left South Africa directly for the United States.

U. S. Furnished 1500 Ships for Sicily Invasion

The Navy disclosed yesterday that more than 1500 of its vessels, ranging from cruisers to small landing craft, effected the landing of United States invasion forces on Sicily. The ships were handled by a force totaling more than 40,000 officers and men.

Revealing details of naval participation in the Allied drive into the Italian island, the Navy said the huge fleet included not only large combat units and many units of landing craft but also a number of antisubmarine patrol vessels and "a swarm of motor torpedo boats."

The American naval units engaged in the largest amphibious operation in history were under immediate direction of Vice Admiral H. K. Hewitt, commander of United States naval forces in North African waters. Hewitt's group was part of the Allied force under the general operational control of British Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, supreme chief of naval forces under General Eisenhower.

Under Hewitt were Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk, Rear Admiral John L. Hall and Rear Admiral Richard L. Conolly.

There were about 2500 ships and craft of various kinds in the total amphibious force thrown against Sicily and the Navy noted that those under the American flag "constituted by far the greatest number in the invasion fleet."

One of the initial waves of American troops was taken across the Mediterranean from North Africa entirely by landing vessels.

"Experienced officers marvelled at the seamanship of the crews—many of whom had never seen the ocean a year ago," the Navy said.

Some of the American forces engaged at Sicily had been transported across the Atlantic specifically for the job. "Huge convoys took over the men and supplies and so securely were they ringed by naval escort vessels, including cruisers, that neither convoy was once attacked," the Navy said.

Japanese Report U. S. Cruiser Sunk

London, July 28 (AP).—The Tokyo radio in a broadcast recorded here by the Associated Press today said the Imperial Japanese high command had announced the sinking of a United States cruiser of the San Francisco class by Japanese submarines on July 20 off San Cristobal Island in the Southwest Pacific. The report was unconfirmed by Allied sources.

The broadcast said the submarines broke through a protective screen of destroyers to score a direct hit on the cruiser. In the San Francisco class are the Astoria, Minneapolis, New Orleans, Tuscaloosa, Quincy and Vincennes.

It's legal again to pay the neighbor boy as much as you please for mowing your lawn.

Ruins of Trapani Port Area Reveal Fury of Allied Assault

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

Trapani, Sicily, July 24 (Delayed).—Bombed Trapani is the ghost town of all Sicily.

Only American soldiers and a few remaining residents move through the all but deserted streets of this fourth largest city on the island. In the perimeter of the town there is comparatively little damage, but areas near the port which the Axis used as a supply center during its abortive North African campaign are heavily battered.

Allied air bombs made a shambles of the piers and warehouses and spars of sunken ships mark a watery graveyard.

From this harbor apex of destruction only four persons are visible—an old man sitting silent in a chair, his head in his hands, and three little brown-eyed Italian girls, one so young the others are pushing her in a baby buggy. They asked for candy. The old man said nothing, sitting still as an unhappy gargoyle—just another ruined figure along a ruined street.

City's Fall Described

Four soldiers came swinging along one street after a dip in the Mediterranean—the first bath they had had in Sicily—and told how the city had fallen.

Said Pvt. Joseph Haymer, Chicago, proudly:

"The infantry moved in under cover of artillery fire. An hour or two of shelling was all it took. The troops just walked in after that. The only resistance was a little mortar and artillery fire. The Italians came out in droves to give up. I heard we took 10,000 prisoners in this area."

The Nazis had more time to get out here, however, and left behind no large numbers of operational aircraft as they were forced to do at Comiso and other airports in the eastern and central parts of Sicily. Among the planes destroyed on the ground were a couple of six-motored Merseburg 323.

One Raider Tied Up Railroad

The most concentrated scene of air-wrought destruction lay a few miles farther on toward Palermo, at the Erice Napola station.

An Italian peasant said a lone American strafing plane had set fire to fuel and ammunition trains. Exploding ammunition had ripped huge holes in the ground. The railroad fuel tanks were crumpled like tin cans and blown yards away. Boxcars gutted to fragments of steel stood in this cradle of Axis disaster with their frames dropping like wet spaghetti.

For hundreds of feet in every direction the seared grass was strewn with chunks of metal. One great span of railroad trackage had been lifted intact and hurled more than 100 yards up the mountainside like a giant javelin.

This solitary American raider had tied up the railroad so completely that the Axis could ship nothing in or out because of the havoc resulting from the colossal explosions of the ammunition train.

Gestapo Seeks To Stamp Out Student Activity

Stockholm, July 28 (AP).—Numerous arrests have been made by Gestapo agents, advices from Germany said today, in a drive to stamp out the activities of Catholic students reported to be working against the Nazis in university towns and cities of southern Germany.

With the fortunes of war turning against Germany, interest in churches generally was said to be growing, and tension was reported especially strong among Catholics in Bavaria.

Circulation of numerous pamphelts attacking the Nazi regime, advices said, has been causing the Gestapo great difficulties in that area.

Two Commons Members Fight It Out; Draw, Say Spectators

By Henry B. Jameson
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, July 28.—A fist fight between two members of Commons vied with the war news for space on the front pages of London's newspapers today.

The principals were Capt. Alec Cunningham-Reid, 47, and Comdr. Oliver Locker-Lampson, 63, and they went at it busily for several minutes in a corridor. It had been a long time since parliamentary dignity had been so upset.

Locker-Lampson, a former weight-lifting champion at Eton, came out of it with a lump on his noggin. His younger and handsomer opponent was described as "bruised." Only a few members saw the milling, and they voted it a draw.

Friend of Doris Duke

The difficulty arose when Capt. Cunningham-Reid, a friend of the heiress, Mrs. Doris Duke Cromwell, asked Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden the nature of the disability Prince Paul of Yugoslavia was suffering which necessitated the prince's removal from Kenya Colony to South Africa.

Locker-Lampson broke in to inquire "What medical disability was Captain Cunningham-Reid suffering when he left England in the blitz?"

This had to do with a trip Cunningham-Reid made to Hawaii during the heavy air attacks on Britain. He explained in Commons last April that he had gone to Hawaii to arrange with Mrs. Cromwell for the evacuation of 500 British children to the United States.

Cunningham-Reid on another occasion had been charged by Minister of Information Brendan Bracken of "beachcombing" in Honolulu during the Battle of Britain.

Angered at Locker-Lampson's question today, the captain commented that his detractor reminded him of the cuckoo, which "makes a nuisance of itself in other people's nests."

When Commons adjourned Cunningham-Reid said he drew Locker-Lampson aside and asked if he were going "to continue making these personal attacks upon me." Then, it seems, he called Locker-Lampson a "nasty old man," and in no time at all they were swinging lustily.

Cunningham-Reid claimed to have scored a knockdown, but there was no official count.

Two German Ships Left Blazing in Battle Off France

London, July 28 (AP).—Light British naval forces fought a close-range battle with a dozen enemy armed trawlers and motor torpedo boats off Cherbourg, France, early yesterday and left two German ships blazing, an admiralty communique reported today.

One British warship was hit seriously, but was taken in tow and with the aid of a smoke screen succesfully taken to port, the communique said.

Nazis Say 11 Ships Sunk, 11 Damaged

London, July 28 (AP).—The German high command asserted in its broadcast communique today that 11 Allied ships and boats had been sunk and 11 others, including a light cruiser, had been damaged in various air and sea actions. The claims were without Allied confirmation.

Red Reich Plan Surprise, Eden Says

London, July 28 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told Commons in response to a question today the British government was not informed in advance of the establishment of the "Free German Committee" in Moscow, disclosed in Russian dispatches last week.

Eden drew cheers when he added the government did "not propose to recognize any similar committee in this country."

RICH, RED FIGHTING BLOOD!
When doctors say your blood is poor, they know how serious it is. They know that rich red blood is the stream of life, performing the vitally important job of keeping you well, husky, strong, bubbling over with energy; and that when blood is thin, pale, watery, there is trouble ahead. Your blood, you know, reaches to every single part of your body, bearing with it life-giving oxygen, and carting away the refuse and toxic wastes that constantly occur, as every minute your body is building and destroying tissue. Unless your blood stream is able to bear its cargo of oxygen, unless it is constantly delivering body-building nutriment to thes. tissues, and unless it is efficiently carrying away the waste, you can't be healthy and strong. So — when you are tired, sickly, rundown, constantly ailing, by all means look to your blood stream.
What Makes Rich, Red Blood
Healthy nourishing blood is composed of a number of elements, including protein fats, carbohydrates, mineral salts, vitamins, and a mysterious red blood cell building substance (most generously found in raw liver). Many of these elements you get in your daily diet, although three — iron, vitamins and the blood-building elements — are often seriously deficient. In Boncquet Tablets, a new easy to take tablet tonic there is combined Red Blood Cell Maturing Factor (raw liver principle); Vegetable (Organic) iron and other minerals derived from parsley and other wholesome ingredients to insure a high natural vitamin and mineral content Vitamin B complex which contains these vitamins fortified with pure crystalline vitamins B and G; easily assimilable calcium and phosphorus.

Yanks Down 13 Jap Planes in Hankow Raid

By Thoburn Wiant
Associated Press Staff Writer

At United States Fourteenth Air Force Headquarters in China, July 26 (Delayed).—United States medium bombers and fighters raided Hankow today, destroying many enemy installations and shooting down 13 Japanese fighters in retaliation for Japanese attacks on advanced American bases in the last three days.

The toll increased to 44 the number of enemy aircraft destroyed since the Japanese raids began July 23, compared with losses of 2 American planes.

The Japanese lost 13 planes on Friday, 14 on Saturday, 4 on Sunday and 13 today.

Jap Attack Futile

The Japanese tried again unsuccessfully yesterday to knock out eastern air bases of the United States force. They bombed one field, which was usable immediately afterward, then bombed another field and town. There were a few civilian casualties.

American medium bombers on Sunday raided Hankow, recently reinforced enemy base and biggest city of Hupeh Province, hitting dispersal areas, repair shops, hangars and revetments. They met no opposition from ground defenses or enemy planes, and all returned safely, headquarters said.

(A Berlin broadcast under a Nanking dateline said that four U. S. planes were shot down out of a force of 20 in the Sunday raid, while the Japanese lost none.)

Besides the 13 Japanese planes shot down at Hankow 17 more were listed as probably destroyed during the 115-mile battle with 30 to 50 Zeros.

Report On Hongkong Raid

London, July 28 (AP).—The Tokyo radio in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press said today that an attempt by six Allied planes to raid Hongkong yesterday was blocked by the city's anti-aircraft defenses. Heavy flak, the radio reported, caused the planes to jettison their bombs in the water.

Wine, Chicken

Four Yank Captors Fed By Italians

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the American Seventh Army in Western Sicily, July 25 (Delayed).—Four American soldiers who captured an entire airport and 200 Italian troops were welcomed by their prisoners with wine and a chicken dinner.

"It's the oddest thing I've ever heard of in this topsy-turvy war," said Lieut. Richard A. Kahn, San Francisco, who was directing a squad salvaging parts from 40 wrecked Axis planes which the enemy had towed into an olive grove near the field.

"I was driving along the road between Trapani and Marsala yesterday with Sergt. Virgil Butler of Akron, Ohio, and two other soldiers when we saw a white flag flying from the barracks by a little Italian airport.

Waiting to Give Up

"We went up cautiously, taking no chances that it might be a trick, but the group of Italian soldiers we ran into gave up readily. All they wanted to do was surrender. They showed us where they had stacked their guns in a small well nearby.

They told us their commanding officer could be found up the hill in another building. I went up with another soldier and found an Italian captain waiting there. He didn't want any trouble either, and seemed happy to be taken safely into custody. In fact, he was so glad that he broke out a bottle of wine to show his appreciation. It wasn't bad, not bad at all.

Chicken Dinner Served

"When I got back to the barracks there was Sergeant Butler sitting down to a fine dinner of chicken, melon and wine prepared for him by the Italian soldiers. What a war! But of course this doesn't happen every day.

"Before we left the airport we collected 200 prisoners . . . and they were a real problem for four men to keep in order. Most of them said they hoped they would be shipped to New York, where some have relatives."

60 Nazi Planes Downed in Deepest Reich Raid; 23 Forts Lost

The Thunderbolts alone shot down nine challenging Nazis, running the victory score for the day to more than 69 to 24.

Other Spitfire squadrons swept the Dutch coast while medium United States bombers with Spitfire escorts blasted Belgian coke ovens at Zeebrugge. British Typhoon bombers attacked German airfields at Courtrai in Belgium and Melville in northern France. Boston bombers hit Amsterdam, in Holland.

It was the fourth exploit in five days for the Fortresses. Most German fighters stayed out of reach of the massed fire power of the four-engined craft. One formation of 20 Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfs which had lurked in waiting for the Fortresses "dived away to safety" when they were challenged by a Spitfire wing, the British Air Ministry said. Airmen reported that between 150 to 200 enemy fighters attacked the Fortresses.

Hamburg took its unenviable place as one of the most terribly scarred cities of Germany. Pilots said last night's attack, concentrated in 45 minutes, was "even more destructive" than previous raids on the port.

Glows from the immense cauldron were visible for 200 miles.

The defenses of Hamburg had been reinforced and German night fighters had to negotiate their own flak barrage to engage the bombers over the bubbling target.

Even before last night's raid great damage to Hamburg was shown in reconnaissance photographs taken at noon Tuesday. The Air Ministry said the pictures showed fires still licking the docks.

"At least nine very important buildings" in the Blohm & Voss submarine yards were hit, the ministry said. A warehouse in the Hansa Hafen district covering 4 acres was obliterated.

"There is no question that when the full count can be made of damage done before last night, it will extend to hundreds of acres," the Air Ministry added.

The time of the Hamburg raid was five minutes less than the previous record smash on Saturday.

"Every such cut in the bombing period means greater destruction and greater safety for our men and aircraft," the Air Ministry news service explained.

British and American heavy bombers have alternated in pyramiding destruction on the blazing port since Saturday night, the British hitting by night, the Americans by day.

Added to the two great night loads dropped by the R. A. F. were probably more than 500 tons hurled by Fortresses at special targets, such as the yards where U-boats are built and repaired, and a comparatively few tons dropped by R. A. F. Mosquito bombers Sunday and Monday nights.

It was authoritatively estimated that the German air force dropped only 5800 tons of bombs on Britain during September, October and November of 1940.

The latest assault probably put Hamburg close to, if not ahead of, Essen in total weight of bombs suffered since the war began. Essen is estimated to have been blasted by more than 12,000 tons.

While the bombers were over Germany, Mosquitoes made offensive patrols over northern France, attacking three air fields and several railway targets. Altogether, the night's operations were reported to have cost the British and Canadians 18 planes. The Air Ministry announced that five enemy craft were destroyed in an attack on Schipol Airfield in Holland.

Petrillo's Plan for Concerts Called Hyprocrisy by Miller

By the Associated Press

New York, July 28.—Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, said today that James C. Petrillo's plan to provide free symphonic concerts to the Nation was a gesture "unequaled for hypocrisy."

"Mr. Petrillo," the N. A. B. chief said, "has done more to prevent symphonic music in the United States than any other man in the history of the country."

As president of the American Federation of Musicians (A. F. of L.), Petrillo last August banned union members from making musical recordings and radio transcriptions in an employment dispute with recording and radio companies.

Yesterday he announced that his union planned to spend between $250,000 and $500,000 to provide for all expenses in sending large city philharmonic and symphony orchestras to small communities in accordance, he said, with a suggestion made to him by President Roosevelt.

Petrillo said that if the $500,000 were appropriated by the union, it would provide for 570 concerts.

"The good faith of Mr. Petrillo's proposal may be attacked . . . on the basis of his own figures," said Miller. ". . . Mr. Petrillo is allotting less than $10 a man per concert" to cover all expenses.

"It is obvious, therefore," Miller continued, "that Mr. Petrillo proposes to pay the men no compensation, or only nominal compensation."

Petrillo, Miller said, contended that records used commercially in smaller cities deprived local musicians of employment opportunities.

"Yet," he added, "when the unions sets aside $500,000 to bring some music to the American people, it does not employ local musicians. . . . It should be noted that in making this transparent gesture, Mr. Petrillo drops the last vestige of justification for his ban on recordings."

The War Food Administration announced yesterday the resignation of J. S. Russell as assistant to War Food Administrator Marvin Jones.

Russell, whose resignation becomes effective August 2, will return to Des Moines, Iowa, to rejoin the editorial staff of the Des Moines Register and Tribune.

WAAC Ranks 85,000 Shy; Many to Quit

By the Associated Press

Enlistments in the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps (WAAC) are less than half official hopes, D. C. Speaker said yesterday, and withdrawals before the corps becomes an integral part of the Army proper September 1 will deplete its strength further.

"Last May 10, War Department executives expected WAAC strength to reach 150,000 women by June 30," Speaker reported. "On July 5, Col. Oveta Culp Hobby said the corps numbered 65,000, which is 85,000 under expected par."

Speaker also said there was growing concern over the number of corps members who will ask discharges before September 1, when the original Women's Army Auxiliary Corps (WAAC) drops its auxiliary status and becomes part (WAC) of the Army of United States. Legal technicalities connected with the transfer make it possible for any WAAC member to decline to join the WAC.

Many to Quit Corps

"Results of surveys at various Army posts where WAACS are stationed have been spotty," Speaker said, "but at some stations, up to 30 per cent of the WAAC personnel has indicated withdrawal from the corps when it is absorbed into the Army."

Speaker said various reasons have been suggested for the reluctance of United States women to enlist.

"Reports that contraceptives were issued to the WAACS, denied as 'entirely' false by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, had an adverse effect on recruiting," Speaker said, "despite the official denials, and statements of Congresswomen that the charges were Axis-inspired, the moral implications were disquieting to parents of prospective enlistees, and enlistments immediately declined."

Morals Charges Denied

Speaker said actual figures show that charges of lax morals among the WAACS are sheer nonsense. Moral delinquencies necessitating disciplinary discharges among the 65,000 WAACS "could be counted on the fingers of both hands," he added.

"A full statement of the actual number of WAACS discharged for morals offenses would have exploded the charges completely," Speaker said. "The precise figures, which Army authorities will not release, would show there is less likelihood of moral breakdown in the women's services than in almost any other niche in life. The discipline and supervision, and the exacting duties of feminine soldiering, prelude any possibility of widespread moral laxity."

Speaker said another reason for the recruiting lag included dislike of the prohibition against enlisted women dating commissioned officers. The social barriers between commissioned and enlisted ranks have been more widely criticized by women than by men in the Army. The women's services had no trouble filling their officer quotas, Speaker reported, but many women who might otherwise enlist feel they lost social prestige when regulations bar them from accepting dates with all ranks.

unable to pierce German positions either at Orel or east of Lenigrad. It said 164 Russian tanks were destroyed Tuesday.

The Russian half-circle around Orel now stands from last reports at Optushka, 9 miles to the northeast, Zolatarevo, 13 miles west, and Stanovoy Kolodets.

A special Russian communique, also said that "intensive reconnaissance activities" were in progress and artillery fire was exchanged in the Leningrad area. The Germans have announced that the Soviets have begun a push in this area.

Reconnaissance activities only were reported in the Belgorod, Donets Basin and Krasnodar areas.

But the Germans were fighting grimly and the Russians admitted the going was hard.

"Every inch of land won is the result of hard work and stubborn battles," a dispatch in Komsomolskaya Pravda, Soviet youth newspaper, said. Other dispatches said the retreating Germans were burning villages and conscripting Russian civilians into labor gangs to dig trenches.

Rome Says Italy Must Fight On

urgent and necessary matter to attend to is to fight their foreign enemies."

"When there was fascism in Italy the British government kept on saying that they were fighting fiascism alone and not Italy," the broadcast said. "But now that fascism no longer exists, the British continue to declare that they want to destroy and lay waste to Italy from one end to the other. Thus the British government itself gives the lie to its former declaration.

"Italy is faced by an enemy who has declared that he wants Italy's destruction.

"Under these conditions there is but one thing for Italy to do. Continue to fight! And Italy will fight—fight for liberty and for honor."

The broadcast referred to Prime Minister Churchill's statement yesterday that the Italian people must decide whether they want peace or to see their country "seared and scarred and blackened."

"The Italian people needed no further statements by the British Prime Minister in order to be told things of which they are already perfectly well aware," the Rome radio said.

"The British and Americans have nothing to do with the end of fascism in Italy. And actually they have frequently declared they are not at war with the Italian people but with fascism.

"The Italians have never believed it. They have always known that such statements were made merely for propagandistic reasons, with the object to create disunion and disorder in Italy.

"Great Britain has always hoped that the attack on Italy from the outside made by British ships and aircraft might be aided and supported from within by an anti-Fascist revolution, by riots and by civil war. All this did not happen."

which we are at war."

Reported dissolution of the Fascist party:

"We will say it is a good thing, but we will make it plain that we intend to go on fighting—toward unconditional surrender."

Sherwood pointed out that he has held daily conferences on policy with State Department officials and would continue to do so. Elmer Davis, director of OWI, now overseas, maintains direct contact with Secretary Hull when Davis is in Washington, he said.

It was understood that a broad policy directive covering all of OWI is developed weekly—that this policy directive is translated in terms of day-to-day news developments at conferences several times a day in New York City, where the overseas broadcasts originate.

Sherwood told reporters that the conference was called to put OWI policy "on the beam." He said the "late unpleasantness" was not discussed, but added, "We won't be caught off base again."

Foreign Workers Battle in Germany

London, July 28 (INS).—Bloody clashes broke out among foreign workers in Germany and Austria following the news of Mussolini's "resignation," Reuter's reported tonight in a dispatch from Zurich.

The message said Hungarians and Rumanians battled in the industrial districts of Vienna, and that seven Hungarians had been killed. Police were said to have suppressed demonstrations.

Shipyards' Output Exceeds Prewar Total of U. S. Craft

New York, July 28 (AP).—United States shipyards have delivered 1496 merchant vessels since Pearl Harbor, or more than existed in the entire American Flag Fleet at the outbreak of war in Europe in 1939, J. Lewis Luckenbach, president of the American Bureau of Shipping, disclosed today.

"This new production, combined with the American Fleet of September, 1939, totals more than that accredited to the first ranking maritime nation in the world in prewar days," Luckenbach added in addressing the bureau's board of managers.

"However, sinkings have occurred in the fleets of all nations and the exact totals are not available for publication due to censorship restrictions."

Luckenbach asserted, however, that despite war depredations, the American Merchant Marine is greater in number and tonnage than the combined prewar fleets of the Axis powers, when Japan ranked third as a maritime power and Germany and Italy ranked fifth and sixth.

Noncombat Hero Medal Designed

The Philadelphia Mint has begun production of the new Navy and Marine Medal to be awarded for heroism outside actual combat operations, the Treasury said last night.

The medal, to be awarded for actions subsequent to December 6, 1941, bears an eagle, wings outstretched, with feet clasping an anchor. Under the anchor is a globe. It was designed by an unidentified naval officer.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

FDR-Murray Fireworks

SOME HOT words were exchanged between the President and C. I. O. Leader Phil Murray when Murray and other members of the A. F. L.-C. I. O. combined war council called at the White House to discuss wage and price controls.

Murray bluntly charged the President with going back on his promise to roll back prices to Sept. 15, 1942.

You haven't done what you said you were going to do, Mr. President," the C. I. O. chief declared. "Labor is getting tired of being a football."

Obviously nettled by the charge that he hadn't kept his word, the President pressed his lips together, then reminded Murray in frigid tones that if he could get any better cooperation from Congress on price subsidies and other issues than he (Roosevelt) had received, Murray was welcome to try.

Furthermore, he added, acidly, no Administration had done more to improve living conditions for the working man than his own.

"I'm not trying to censure your Administration," countered Murray, "but the record is pretty clear in this case. The War Labor Board is doing all in its power to hold down labor, but these other fellows, like Byrnes (James Byrnes, chief of the Office of War Mobilization) and Brown (Prentiss Brown, head of the OPA) aren't doing anything about controlling the prices the working man has to pay.

"I realize that you've got your hands full running this war, but the time has come to speak out about some of those around you who are supposed to be handling the domestic situation. No one seems to be concerned about increases in the price of things the working man has to buy. The OPA has been letting prices run wild. But every time labor asks for an adjusted increase in wages, there's a roar of protest."

The C. I. O. leader launched into a scorching tirade against Byrnes for "vetoing legitimate requests by labor" for pay increases, intimating that the OWM chief was looking after the interests of management in industrial wage disputes.

"I resent your remarks about Jimmy Byrnes," the President shot back angrily. He added that Byrnes wasn't grinding any axes for anyone and that he was doing a patriotic job to curb inflation to the best of his ability.

The fireworks ended at this point, but Roosevelt and Murray didn't fall over each other saying good-by when the conference adjourned.

Dewey's Motto: 'Be Prepared'

REPUBLICAN BOOSTERS of Tom Dewey say he already has chosen the man who will manage his Presidential campaign if things look propitious six months hence. He is Edwin F. Jaeckle, Republican State chairman of New York. Jaeckle recently sold his home in Buffalo preparatory to throwing himself full tilt into the drive to sell Dewey as the 1944 nominee.

A Nation-wide tour to line up convention delegates is being planned, but meantime Jaeckle has been busy with some minor chores. Recently he was host at a cocktail party in Washington for various G. O. P. Congressmen, especially the Ohio delegation, probably aimed at cutting the ground from Ohio's colorless Presidential hopeful, Gov. John W. Bricker.

Lyndon Loves Wallace

POPULAR, pussy-footing Representative Lyndon Johnson of Texas has been a stanch New Dealer most of the time, but after Henry Wallace was fired from the Board of Economic Warfare he let out some derogatory remarks and said it was a good thing the Vice President was ousted.

Whereupon Representative Johnson got a call from the most powerful man in his congressional district, Publisher Charley Marsh. Marsh owns the Austin American and Austin Statesman in Johnson's home town, together with other newspapers in other parts of Texas. Marsh also helped to manage Johnson's campaign for the Senate against Pappy O'Daniel.

So Johnson went pronto down to the Washington residence of Charley Marsh. Emerging later, a friend heard him remark, "I didn't mean anything at all. I really like Henry Wallace."

Gen. Giraud's Waterloo

GENERAL GIRAUD was shown all the sights of Washington during his stay here, including the War Department's massive Pentagon Building, rated as the largest office building in the world.

After the French commander had been led through the labyrinth of Pentagon corridors to General Staff headquarters, and later out into the sunlight, he was asked what he thought of the place.

"Well," remarked General Giraud, "I've escaped from two German prisons, but I could never get out of this building."

Md. Grange Prefers War 1 Price-Fixing

Baltimore, July 28 (AP).—The executive committee of the Maryland State Grange endorsed today the stand of the national organization in its opposition ot price rollbacks and general wage increases.

In resolutions adopted at a meeting under the chairmanship of David G. Harry of Pylesville, the committee urged that the policies of the last war be adopted in fixing prices on foodstuffs "all along the line."

The committee also favored rationing and price control "under one responsible head."

Poliomyelitis on Increase, Officials Say

By the Associated Press

The United States Public Health Service reported yesterday that the incidence of infantile paralysis had reached epidemic proportions in several Southwestern States and that cumulative figures for the entire Nation during the first six and one-half months of the year were the highest in 12 years.

A sharp rise in the number of cases since early June was largely accounted for by outbreaks in Texas, California and Oklahoma, doctors of the service said, adding that no specific cause could be assignd for the situation and that no predictions could be made as to the possibilities of a further spread.

They warned that the public should be acquainted with precautions that might be taken in the event of an outbreak, but should not become hysterical, inasmuch as every known safeguard would be taken by the medical profession and health departments.

Cases Show Increase

Latest available figures—for the week ended July 17—showed 297 cases in the United States, as compared with 245 for the preceding week and a five-year average of 101 cases.

In the latest report, 231 cases, or 94 per cent, were reported from three States—Texas, which had 102; California, 90, and Oklahoma, 39. During the first week in June, Texas reported 6 cases, California 35 and Oklahoma, none.

Arizona reported only 3 cases for the week ended July 17, but for the first half of the year that State had a total of 45.

Previous to July 17, no State other than those four had reported more than 6 cases in any week this year, but in the latest report, New York announced 11 cases, as compared with 5 the week before, and Kansas and Arkansas had 7 each.

For the first 28 weeks of this year, 1626 cases were listed for the entire Nation.

The incidence of infantile paralysis normally increases in the summer months, but the cumulative totals for the first 28 weeks of this year compare with 751 in the same period last year and 948 for the previous five-year median. The cumulative figure is more than that for the corresponding period of any year since 1934 when 2694 cases were reported.

Health service doctors said infantile paralysis could be combated during any outbreak if people avoid becoming overtired. Care should be taken against sudden chilling, such as by plunging into very cold water on an extremely hot day.

Children should be kept away from large groups, and apparently minor illnesses of children should not be dismissed lightly.

Any unexplained fever in either child or grown-up should be the signal for rest in bed and isolation until medical diagnosis can be made.

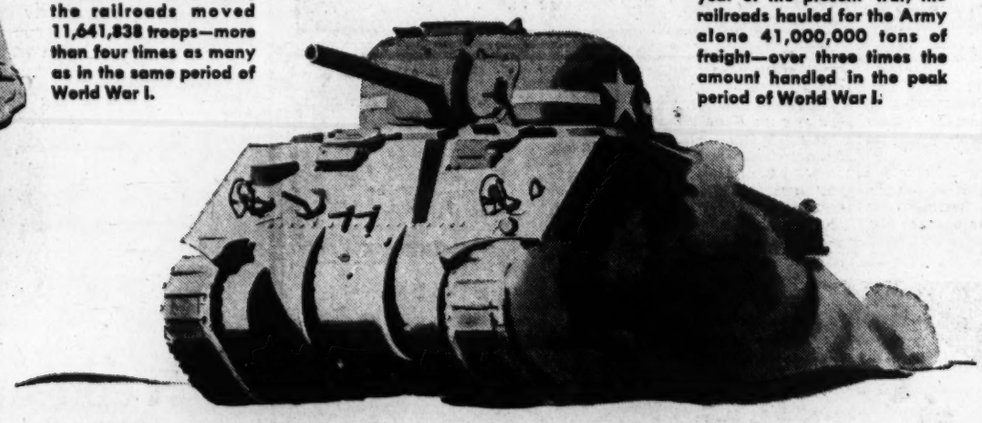
WORLD WAR I

Troops. In the first 12 months of the last war, the railroads moved 2,734,527 troops, including inductees.

Supplies. Between July 1918 and June 1919—peak period for freight movement of the last war, and immediately thereafter—the railroads handled 11,224,427 tons of Army freight.

WORLD WAR II

Troops. In the first 12 months of this war, the railroads moved 11,641,838 troops—more than four times as many as in the same period of World War I.



Supplies. During the first year of the present war, the railroads hauled for the Army alone 41,000,000 tons of freight—over three times the amount handled in the peak period of World War I.

Offhand, how much equipment do you suppose it took to move those 11,641,838 troops?

21,000 special trains!

Thousands of passenger cars . . . thousands of freight cars . . . thousands of locomotives—equipment of all kinds.

Any wonder, then, why you may find it difficult to procure a berth or seat for an essential trip . . . or be obliged to wait for a place in the dining car?

With the equipment available for civilian travel, the railroads are doing their best to accommodate the public.

By abstaining from unnecessary travel . . . scheduling trips for Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday, when traffic is not quite so heavy . . . promptly cancelling a Pullman reservation you cannot use . . . taking aboard as little luggage as possible—you are helping to make available equipment serve the greatest number of persons, and the Pennsylvania Railroad—as well as others—deeply appreciates this cooperation.

Realtors Hail Report On OPA Rent Rule

Association Officer Says Every Point Made Is 'Sustained'

The National Association of Real Estate Boards yesterday hailed the Smith Committee report on OPA's rent control as pointing the way toward improvement of the system.

"After careful investigation and extended hearings in which the fullest opportunity was given to the rent control division of OPA to answer complaints brought against it, a congressional committee has determined that there is great need for revision of the OPA rent control operation," Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president of NARB, said.

"The report of the Smith Committee sustains every contention raised by realtors regarding the administration of rent control. Complaints were carefully sifted and the overwhelming evidence led the committee to conclude that OPA had been guilty of excessive use of power, the trampling of State and local laws, incitement of ill-will between tenants and owners and invasion of constitutional rights of citizens," Nelson asserted.

Blackmail Charge Erased As a Reward

Because he risked his life in an influenza experiment conducted by the United States Navy at San Quentin Penitentiary, California, last year, James Lutz, 33, was freed of a blackmail charge yesterday.

Lutz was indicted on a charge of blackmailing an accountant here of $25 in 1939. But before he came to trial, he jumped bond and was declared a fugitive.

Lutz was finally picked up in 1941 on a felony charge in California, according to Assistant U. S. Attorney Cecil Heflin, and was sentenced to serve a one-year term in San Quentin. He was ordered brought back here for trial upon completion of his term.

Recently, however, the warden of San Quentin wrote a letter stating:

"A short time ago a group of United States Navy doctors came to San Quentin to conduct an experiment in the control of influenza. . . . . Mr. Lutz, I am glad to say, was in the first group to volunteer."

Communication also was received that Lutz seems to have rehabilitated himself and on his release probably would be a law-abiding citizen.

Heflin stated that he felt that Lutz' sacrifice and the other factors in the case warranted the nolle prosse be entered with District Court.

Much of Marine's Life Spent In Cleaning, Stavisky Says

(The following story was written by Staff Sergt. Samuel Stavisky, formerly an assistant city editor of The Post, now a Marine Corps combat correspondent.)

Somewhere in the South Pacific (Delayed).—From the moment the bugle blows reveille and the boatswain's mate pipes, "Up all hands," the day of a seagoing marine is a merry-go-round.

The bugler doesn't actually make the rounds and blow his 90-odd calls in each sleeper's car, but he might as well. The ship's loudspeaker system, an arm's-length from your bunk, accomplishes the same result.

And each call marks off its own segment of the busy day's schedule—mess, drill, school—but most of all cleaning.

In port or at sea, it's clean, clean, clean. Decks, overheads, bulkheads and metalwork. Pipes and fittings. Furniture and furnishings. Long-range guns and antiaircraft guns.

Sweep down. Swab down. Clamp down. Turn to. Marines do it. Sailors do it.

Frenzy of Cleaning

A mania six days a week, cleaning becomes a veritable frenzy on Friday—field day—when all other activity is suspended for a concerted cleanup preparing for captain's inspection on Saturday.

Since continental marines helped John Paul Jones establish respect for the United States Navy with their accurate Revolutionary War musketry, sharpshooting Leathernecks have manned the masts, the shrouds, and the fighting tops of our ships.

This modern man-o-war is a dozen times bigger than Commander Jones' Bonhomme Richard, but she, too, places her Marines on the fighting top.

High on the superstructure, her Marines can man light antiaircraft guns. These short-range guns, manned by both Marines and sailors, are last line of defense against both torpedo and dive bombers, modern equivalent of historic, infighting boarding parties.

Early in the history of the British and American navies and the privateers, Marines were used generally as military police, a task which created bad feeling among sailors.

Today the Leathernecks man the smaller guns alongside of the bluejackets. Intense competition and friendly rivalry in practice, and in combat, have developed mutual respect and teamwork between the services.

Shipboard Marines still retain their traditional duties—brig sentries, bow sentries, color guard, guard of the day, and orderlies for admiral and captain.

But spot an enemy plane, and they're all fighting Yanks.

When I boarded this ship at a Pacific naval base, it seemed as massive as a group of New York skyscrapers against the background of storm clouds. Appearance is deceptive, for aboard ship, particularly below deck, space is an acute problem.

All Space Utilized

Every foot of space is utilized for hammocks, sandwiched in tiers are lockers or other gear.

It's not bad sleeping below in port, for there are no mosquitoes or flies aboard ship. At sea, however, every hatch and porthole is battened down tight. Not even the modern ventilating system can duplicate the fresh salt tang of the air on deck.

How the cooks turn out such delicious chow in their cramped seagoing galleys is always a mystery to sailors and marines. One menu last week included stuffed olives, sweet mixed pickles, stuffed celery hearts, rice turkey soup, roast tom turkey with sage dressing, cranberry sauce, snowflake potatoes and giblet gravy, buttered asparagus, cole slaw and sweet dressing, Parker House rolls and butter, pumpkin pie and coffee, candy and mixed nuts.

Most old-time Marines always want to get back on sea duty. They claim the salt air gets into their blood.

Maybe so. Personally, I think it's the chow that brings them back.

believe that the union will have successfully circumvented the board's order. All employes voting to strike would, in effect, be voting to select the U. M. W. for representation purposes.

Under the act, workers are free to strike, once the strike vote has been taken, even if a majority vote against striking. Such a strike, even by a minority of employes, could be used as a basis for raiding the C. I. O.'s jurisdiction, it is believed.

A similar strike by the U. M. W. against the C. I. O. at the Celanese Corp. New Jersey plant forced the President to threaten seizure of the plant to break the walkout.

However, if Biddle decides that only certified bargaining agents may file strike votes, the NLRB will be able to throw out the U. M. W.'s strike notice, thus avoiding the projected August 4 strike vote.

No representation issue is involved in the Newark laundry case. The notice was filed by the A. F. of L. Teamsters with wages, hours and route conditions in dispute.

Section 8 of the Connally Act—the one providing for the strike notice and vote—provoked President Roosevelt's veto of the act. The President expressed the opinion that granting the right to file strike notices was inconsistent with the no-strike pledge and would provoke strikes.

Government and labor officials informally agree that the act will be much less strike-provoking if the right to file strike notices is restricted to authorized bargaining agents. However, there is considerable doubt that Biddle will be able to get around the broad definitions provided in the law.

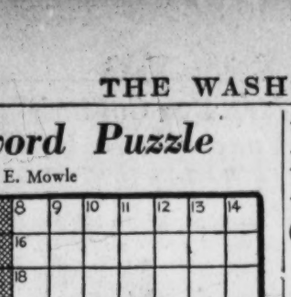
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.



Feelers Out on Sales Tax, Forced Loans

Treasury abandonment of its spending tax in favor of income tax revision up the line and broadened excises.

"Sales taxes have the virtue of directly reaching war spending and afford to those desiring to economize or forced to economize an opportunity to do so," said Robertson.

"Yet I am of the opinion that Congress will hesitate to buck determined opposition from the President and the Treasury on that issue."

A sales tax has uniformly been opposed by the Administration while compulsory savings has been favored only as a last resort. Faced with urgent need of 12 billion dollars new revenue, Congress must choose between these and both corporate and individual income tax increases.

In an interview Robertson said Congress "won't get far in framing a new bill that will produce even a major part of the requested 12 billion dollars if for social reform reasons there is any particular group to be soaked, or if for political reasons there is any group to be shielded from war taxes."

Present Inflation Cost

The Virginian said inflation is already costing the war effort 25 billion dollars a year, and has added a similar amount to the cost of living. If one dollar paid out in increased taxes will head off two dollars in new inflations costs, he said it will be "a dollar well spent" from the standpoint of the taxpayer. With need of new taxes "crystal clear" he said the choice is limited to methods.

Robertson praised War Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson, now in overall charge of Administration tax planning as "a good tax man who has the respect as wel las the friendship of members of the Ways and Means Committee" on which he once served.

The Victory tax study released meanwhile by the Congressional Joint Committee on internal revenue said it would take more than a 5 per cent increase in each surtax bracket to make up the $4,200,000,000 gross or $2,700,000,000 net revenue loss that would result from repeal of the Victory tax.

High Rate Foreseen

"It will be difficult to receive the same revenue as the Victory tax yields from a retail sales tax, or from lowering income tax exemptions or increasing income tax rates," said the joint committee staff, headed by Colin F. Stam.

To raise the same amount for the calendar year 1943 from a retail sales tax, with food, clothing and medicine exempted, the rate would have to be at least 18.5 per cent to equal the Victory tax gross yield, or 12 per cent to equal the Victory tax net yield. If the loss is to be made up through lowering the exemptions for the regular income tax, it should be pointed out that this may be much harder on the low-income groups."

In suggesting the Victory tax as a "model" for a compulsory savings plan, the committee study said that in the latter there should be no limit on the credit for the amount of bonds purchased.

Death Toll 13 In Hurricane On Texas Coast

By the Associated Press

Houston, Texas, July 28.—Thirteen persons were reported dead tonight, scores were injured and property damage soared to around 10 million dollars after the Texas Gulf Coast from Houston to Port Arthur was battered by a raging tropical hurricane.

Army engineers at Galveston said 10 bodies had been recovered from North Jetty after the dredge Galveston sank following a terrific pounding against the rocks.

19.24 Inches of Rain

One person was drowned at Port Arthur, another at Houston, and a Negro woman was crushed to death by a falling radio tower at Galveston.

Electric power to pump water from the mainland was cut off at Galveston, bringing fears of a drinking water shortage. The situation became less serious, however, after five wells were put back in operation.

In Galveston, Houston, Port Arthur, the tri-cities area of Goose Creek, Baytown and Pelly and La Porte, plate glass windows were shattered, signs torn from their moorings, houses unroofed and some blown down, and trees uprooted and spread across streets and highways.

Motorboats were being used to evacuate residents from the lower sections of Port Arthur after 19.24 inches of rain —one of the heaviest rainfalls ever recorded in the Southwest—flooded the ity.

132-Mile Wind

Homes were flooded as muh as 3 feet deep and tonight water began backing into the Port Arthur business district and lapping into stores.

The Hurricane, one of the most severe ever to hit the Gulf Coast, reached 132 miles an hour.

Texas Rain Tops Total Here in Entire Year

The rainfall of 19.24 inches that fell in the lower sections of Port Arthur during the Texas hurricane was almost an inch more than fell in the Washington area during an entire year.

In noting this contrast, the Weather Bureau said only 18.79 inches of rain fell here in 1826, according to official records antedating establishment of the bureau. The average annual rainfall here is 42.16 inches while the heaviest for any 24-hour period in this section was 7.31 inches recorded in August, 1928.

Ickes Optimistic On Gas Prospect

of last winter, when we supplied 75 per cent of normal requirements.

"It is our earnest hope," Davies said, "that we may do better, for we shall never be satisfied until we are able to supply 100 per cent of the heating oil requirements. We want everybody comfortably warm. We have never ceased to work unremittingly toward that end."

"The outlook is very definitely improved over a year ago," Davies said. "Yet even as I say this, I am conscious of the obligation to warn against any tendency to optimism; and perhaps the best way to do this is to set down our assets against our liabilities and see how we balance out.

Overland Transport Soars

"Outstanding on the credit side is the tremendous improvement that has been brought about in our capacity for moving oil over land. Two years ago we were moving less than 100,000 barrels of oil per day into the Eastern States by overland facilities. A year ago, this figure had been built up to a million barrels daily. As of today, this movement has soared to a daily total of more than 1,400,000 barrels, and it is scheduled to pass 1,500,000 by the beginning of the heating season.

Petroleum Administration officials explained that the 35 per cent of normal inventory position at this time was not alarming in view of the prospects of greater supply through the pipelines from Texas. It was also pointed out that considerable gains have been secured by completion of 25 out of 32 "second hand" pipeline projects—making use of existing pipeline facilities by converting them to the job of bringing oil eastward.

Ickes had previously indicated that the public should expect little relief from the pipelines because of enormous military needs.

Whether the better supply situation would permit a restoration of the original coupon value of 4 gallons a coupon in the East could not be determined. An increase in the value of A rations from 1½ gallons to 3 gallons a week was regarded as possible.

Dysentery Cases Increase

Richmond, Va., July 28 (AP).—The State health department today reported 439 cases of diarrhea and dysentery in Virginia, more than double the number of cases in the comparable week of 1942 and far above the median.

Rites to Be Held For John Fuller At Church Today

Funeral services for John J. Fuller, 59, who died Tuesday at his home, 2725 Thirty-first Street Northwest, will be held at 9:30 o'clock this morning at his residence. Requiem mass will be sung at 10 o'clock at St. Thomas' Church, 2702 Twenty-second Street Northwest. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Employed by the Veterans Administration for the last 25 years, he was assistant chief of supply in the Procurement Division at the time of his death.

Mr. Fuller served with the Anti-aircraft Forces at Langres, France, during World War I. He was a member of Cathedral Post No. 10, American Legion, of the Potomac Council, Knights of Columbus, and the Holy Name Society.

He is survived by his wife, Mary Dore Fuller; two sons, Robert Dore Fuller, a senior at Georgetown University, and John J. Fuller, jr., Naval Air Cadet in Preflight School, Chapel Hill, N. C.; a brother, the Rev. Edward A Fuller, and two sisters, May Fuller and Mrs. Michael McDermott, all of Washington.

Grange Fights as National Peril Labor's Food Price, Wage Demands

Farm spokesmen took sharp issue with labor leaders on home front problems yesterday, the National Grange appealing to the Administration to resist labor's demands for either a rollback of food prices or general wage increases.

Either or both steps, said the executive committee of the Grange, one of the major national farm organizations, would "deepen our impending food crisis and eventually bring about uncontrolled inflation and collapse."

The Grange found fault with arguments of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations that food costs had advanced out of line with wages.

See Food Outgo Low

"We are spending for food but 21 per cent of our income, believed to be the lowest percentage of any Nation on earth," the Grange committee said. "This is in vivid contrast to the 60 per cent in England whose rollback subsidy program we are asked to use as a model. Yet even at the low figure of 21 per cent, we have raised our dietary standards sharply."

President Roosevelt and his economic high command are studying ways of tightening Government controls over food prices, and of reducing them as near as possible to the level of last September 15. Government purchase at present prices and resale of consumer distribution at lower prices is one method under consideration. Another is extension of the rollback sudsidy program.

Fears Curtailment

The policy demanded by labor, said the Grange committee, would result in further curtailment of "our food supply which already has suffered because of unsound, impractical and restrictive regulations by the Office of Price Administration."

The farm organization asserted that the real problem confronting the country was an excess of purchasing power over consumer goods and that this was increasing at the rate of two billion dollars a month. The gap, the Grange said, must be reduced or closed by siphoning off surplus income through taxation and systematic savings.

The Grange said food production, rationing and price control should be placed under one responsible head, and that rationing should be used only to effect equitable distribution of goods produced in insufficient quantities.

It urged reestablishment of the food stamp plan to aid consumers whose incomes have not kept pace with living costs.

Ex-Senator Has Alphabet For All World

By Francis J. Kelly
Associated Press Staff Writer

Using 41 novel symbols and holding 16 others in reserve, former United States Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma has developed a "global alphabet" he thinks capable of breaking down the world's language barriers.

"Through it I can teach any reasonably intelligent man Chinese in two months," he enthused. "It is a means by which we can teach the English language to all the world at high speed and negligible cost. It will pay its own way."

Although at first glance Owen's alphabet appears to resemble some shorthand systems, he said it was entirely different. His is based on 18 vowel sounds, 18 consonants and 5 double consonants—"ch," "sh," "th," "ng," and "wh." The 41 regular letters are little hooks and wiggles and slashes and curves.

Emergency Symbols Ready

In case it develops that Tibetan or Urdu or some other tongue contains sounds not capable of expression by the 41, Owen has 16 orthographic substitutes warming the bench. In general, they are angular or triangular in form.

Owen, at 87, is blind—a handicap he scoffs at.

"I just dictated them to my secretary, by metes and bounds," he explained. "In my mind, I would picture a square, and describe to her how the character should fit Smith's limits."

("Metes and bounds" is a surveyors' term, used to describe the boundaries of an enclosure.)

A former Indian agent for the Five Civilized Tribes in Oklahoma, Owen was inspired by Chief Sequoia, who in 1823 invented an 85-character alphabet which enabled his Cherokee tribesmen to learn in two or three weeks to write their own language.

An outline of Owen's system was printed recently as Senate Document No. 49 at the request of Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Oklahoma. Illustrations show the global alphabet standing in for the conventional letters of Latin, Greek, French, Japanese, Chinese and Cherokee Indian.

Not to Mention the Savings

As for English, a few simple waggles of the pen and there was: "I saw Esau kiss Miss Kate. The fact is, we all three saw; I saw Esau, he saw me, and she saw I saw Esau."

Owen said his shorter, phonetic word forms would save paper, ink and postage, that spelling no longer would be a problem and that "the use of this system with its defined pronunciation would have a tendency to end or limit brogues and dialects."

But in announcing that the copyrighted system would be "my free gift to the world," the former Senator stressed this:

"The global alphabet comprises a mechanical agency through which to make effective the dreams of the great men now leading the people of the United Nations in a struggle for peace, abundance, goodwill, justice and happiness. The Four Freedoms, the Atlantic Charter, the Twentieth Century economic policy adopted by the London Chamber of Commerce, could be quickly put before the world."

Full Text of President's War Progress Report to Nation

The text of President Roosevelt's address last night follows:

Over a year and a half ago I said to the Congress: "The militarists in Berlin, Rome and Tokyo started this war, but the massed, angered forces of common humanity will finish it."

That prophecy is in the process of being fulfilled. The massed, angered forces of common humanity are on the march. They are going forward—on the Russian front, in the vast Pacific area, and into Europe—converging upon their ultimate objectives, Berlin and Tokyo.

The first crack in the Axis has come. The criminal, corrupt Fascist regime in Italy is going to pieces.

The pirate philosophy of the Fascists and Nazis cannot stand adversity. The military superiority of the United Nations—on sea and land, and in the air—has been applied in the right place and at the right time.

Hitler refused to send sufficient help to save Mussolini. In fact, Hitler's troops in Sicily stole the Italians' motor equipment, leaving Italian soldiers so stranded that they had no choice but to surrender. Once again the Germans betrayed their Italian allies, as they had done time and time again on the Russian Front and in the long retreat from Egypt, through Libya and Tripoli, to the final surrender in Tunisia.

Aid to the Vanquished

Mussolini came to the reluctant conclusion that the "jig was up"; he could see the shadow of the long arm of justice.

But he and his Fascist gang will be brought to book, and punished for their crimes against humanity. No criminal will be allowed to escape by the expedient of "resignation."

Our terms to Italy are still the same as our terms to Germany and Japan—"unconditional surrender."

We will have no truck with fascism in any way, shape or manner. We will permit no vestige of fascism to remain.

Eventually Italy will reconstitute herself. It will be the people of Italy who will do that, choosing their own government in accordance with the basic democratic principles of liberty and equality. In the meantime, the United Nations will not follow the pattern set by Mussolini and Hitler and the Japanese for the treatment of occupied countries—the pattern of pillage and starvation.

We are already helping the Italian people in Sicily. With their cordial cooperation, we are establishing and maintaining security and order; we are dissolving the organizations which have kept them under Fascist tyranny; we are providing them with the necessities of life until the time comes when they can fully provide for themselves.

Indeed, the people in Sicily today are rejoicing in the fact that, for the first time in years, they are permitted to enjoy the fruits of their own labors—they can eat what they themselves grow instead of having it stolen from them by the Fascists and the Nazis.

In every country conquered by the Nazis, the Fascists or the Japanese militarists, the people have been reduced to the status of slaves or chattels.

It is our determination to restore these conquered peoples to the dignity of human beings, masters of their own fate, entitled to freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom from want, freedom from fear.

We have started to make good on that promise.

I am sorry if I step on the toes of those Americans who, playing party politics at home, call that kind of foreign policy "crazy altruism" and "starry-eyed dreaming."

Meanwhile the war in Sicily and Italy goes on. It must go on, and will go on, until the Italian people realize the futility of continuing to fight in a lost cause—a cause to which the people of Italy never gave their wholehearted approval and support.

Long Time Planning

It is little over a year since we planned the North African campaign. It is six months since we planned the Sicilian campaign. I confess that I am of an impatient disposition, but I think that I understand, and that most people understand, the amount of time necessary to prepare for any major military or naval operation. We cannot just pick up the telephone and order a new campaign to start the next week.

For example, behind the invasion forces of North Africa were thousands of ships and planes guarding the long, perilous sea lanes, carrying the men, the equipment and the supplies to the point of attack. And behind all these were the railroad lines and highways that carried the men and the munitions to the ports of embarkation—there were the factories and the mines and the farms that turned out the materials—there were the training camps where the men learned how to perform the strange and difficult and dangerous tasks which were to meet them on the beaches and in the deserts and the mountains.

All this had to be repeated in the attack on Sicily. Here the factor of air attack was added—for we could use North Africa as the base for softening up the landing places and lines of defense in Sicily, and the lines of supply in Italy.

Vast Amount of Materiel

It is interesting for us to realize that every Flying Fortress that bombed harbor installations at Naples from its base in North Africa required 1110 gallons of gasoline for each single mission, and that this is the equal of about 375 "A" ration tickets—enough gas to drive your car five times across this continent. You will better understand your part in the war—and what gasoline rationing means—if you multiply this by the gasoline needs of thousands of planes and hundreds of thousands of jeeps, trucks and tanks now serving overseas.

I think that the personal convenience of the individual or the individual family back home here in the United States will appear somewhat less important when I tell you that the initial assault force on Sicily involved 3000 ships which carried 160,000 men—Americans, British, Canadians and French—together with 14,000 vehicles, 600 tanks and 1800 guns. This initial force was followed every day and every night by thousands of reinforcements.

The meticulous care with which the operation in Sicily was planned has paid dividends. For our casualties in men, ships and materiel have been low—in fact, far below our estimate.

All of us are proud of the superb skill and courage of the officers and men who have conducted and are conducting this operation. The toughest resistance developed on the front of the British Eighth Army, which included the Canadians. But that is no new experience for that magnificent fighting force which has made the Germans pay a heavy price for each hour of delay in the final victory. The American Seventh Army, after a stormy landing on the exposed beaches of southern Sicily, swept with record speed across the island into Palermo. For many of our troops this was their first battle experience, but they have carried themselves like veterans.

Leaders Win Praise

And we must give credit for the coordination of the diverse forces in the field, and for the planning of the whole campaign, to the wise and skillful leadership of General Eisenhower. Admiral Cunningham, General Alexander and Air Marshal Tedder have been towers of strength in handling the complex details of naval, ground and air activities.

You have heard some people say that the British and the Americans can never get along well together—you have heard some people say that the Army and Navy and Air Forces can never get along well together—that real cooperation between them is impossible. Tunisia and Sicily have given the lie, once and for all, to these narrow-minded prejudices.

The dauntless fighting spirit of the British people in this war has been expressed in the historic words and deeds of Winston Churchill—and the world knows how the American people feel about him.

Ahead of us are much bigger fights. We and our Allies will go into them as we went into Sicily—together. And we shall carry on together.

Huge Shipping Tonnage

Today our production of ships is almost unbelievable. This year we are producing over 19 million tons of merchant shipping and next year our production will be over 21 million tons. And in addition to our shipments across the Atlantic we must realize that in this war, we are operating in the Aleutians, in the distant parts of the southwest Pacific, in India and off the shores of South America.

For several months we have been losing fewer ships by sinkings, and we have been destroying more and more U-boats. We hope this will continue. But we cannot be sure. We must not lower our guard for one single instant.

One tangible result of our great increase in merchant shipping—which will be good news to civilians at home—is that tonight we are able to terminate the rationing of coffee. We also expect that within a short time we shall get greatly increased allowances of sugar.

Those few Americans who grouse and complain about the inconveniences of life here in the United States should learn some lessons from the civilian populations of our Allies—Britain, China, Russia—and of all the lands occupied by our common enemies.

Russian Fronts Solid

The heaviest and most decisive fighting today is going on in Russia. I am glad that the British and we have been able to contribute somewhat to the striking power of the Russian armies.

In 1941-1942 the Russians were able to retire without breaking, to move many of their war plants from western Russia far into the interior, to stand together with complete unanimity in the defense of their homeland.

The success of the Russian armies has shown that it is dangerous to make prophecies about them—a fact forcibly brought home to that mystic master of strategic intuition, Herr Hitler.

The short-lived German offensive, launched early this month, was a desperate attempt to bolster the morale of the German people. The Russians were not fooled by this. They went ahead with their own plans for attack—plans which coordinate with the whole United Nations' offensive strategy.

The world has never seen greater devotion, determination and self-sacrifice than have been displayed by the Russian people and their armies, under the leadership of Marshal Joseph Stalin.

With a nation which, in saving itself is thereby helping to save all the world from the Nazi menace, this country should always be glad to be a good neighbor and a sincere friend in the world of the future.

If the Pacific we are pushing the Japs around from the Aleutians to New Guinea. There, too, we have taken the initiative—and we are not going to let go of it.

It becomes clearer and clearer that the attrition, the whittling down process against the Japanese is working. The Japs have lost more planes and more ships than they have been able to replace.

The continuous and energetic prosecution of the war of attrition will drive the Japs back from their overextended line running from Burma and Siam and the Straits Settlement through the Netherlands Indies to eastern New Guinea and the Solomons. We have good reason to believe that their shipping and their air power cannot support such outposts.

Our naval, land and air strength in the Pacific is constantly growing. If the Japanese are basing their future plans for the Pacific on a long period in which they will be permitted to consolidate and exploit their conquered resources they had better start revising their plans now. I give that to them merely as a helpful suggestion.

Further Aid to China

We are delivering planes and vital war supplies for the heroic armies of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, and we must do more at all costs.

Our air supply line from India to China across enemy territory continues despite attempted Japanese interference. We have seized the initiative from the Japanese in the air over Burma and now enjoy superiority. We are bombing Japanese communications, supply dumps, and bases in China, Indo-China and Burma.

But, we are still far from our main objectives in the war against Japan. Let us remember how far we were, a year ago, from any of our objectives in the European theater.

We are pushing forward to occupation of positions which in time will enable us to attack the Japanese islands themselves from the north, from the south, from the east, and from the west.

You have heard it said that while we are succeeding greatly on the fighting front, we are failing miserably on the home front. This is another of those immaturities—a false slogan easy to state but untrue in the essential facts.

All Fronts Bound Together

For, the longer this war goes on the clearer it becomes that no one can draw a blue pencil down the middle of a page and call one side "the fighting front" and the other side "the home front." The two of them are inexorably tied together.

Every combat division, every naval task force, every squadron of fighting planes is dependent for its equipment and ammunition and fuel and food, as indeed it is for its manpower, on the American people in civilian clothes in the offices and in the factories and on the farms at home.

The same kind of careful planning that gained victory in North Africa and Sicily is required if we are to make victory an enduring reality and do our share in building the kind of peaceful world will justify the sacrifices made in this war.

The United Nations are substantially agreed on the general objectives for the postwar world. They are also agreed that this is not the time to engage in an international discussion of all terms of peace and all the details of the future. We must not relax our pressure on the enemy by taking time out to define every boundary and settle every political controversy in every part of the world. The all-important thing now is to get on with the war—and to win it.

While concentrating on military victory, we are not neglecting the planning of the things to come, the freedoms which we know will make for more decency and greater justice throughout the world.

The Fruits of Peace

Among many other things we are, today, laying plans for the return to civilian life of our gallant men and women in the armed services. They must not be demobilized into an environment of inflation and unemployment, to a place on a bread line or on a corner selling apples. We must, this time, have plans ready—instead of waiting to do a hasty, inefficient, and ill-considered job at the last moment.

I have assured our men in the armed forces that the American people would not let them down when the war is won.

I hope that the Congress will help in carrying out this assurance, for obviously the Executive Branch of the Government cannot do it alone. May the Congress do its duty in this regard. The American people will insist on fulfilling this American obligation to the men and women in the armed forces who are winning this war for us.

Of course, the returning soldier and sailor and marine are a part of the problem of demobilizing the rest of the millions of Americans who have been working and living in a war economy since 1941. That larger objective of reconverting war-time America to a peace-time basis is one for which your Government is laying plans to be submitted to the Congress for action.

But the members of the armed forces have been compelled to make greater economic sacrifice and every other kind of sacrifice than the rest of us, and are entitled to definite action to help take care of their special problems.

Mustering-Out Program

The least to which they are entitled, it seems to me, is something like this:

1. Mustering-out pay to every member of the armed forces and merchant marine when he or she is honorably discharged, large enough in each case to cover a reasonable period of time between his discharge and the finding of a new job.
2. In case no job is found after diligent search, then unemployment insurance if the individual registers with the United States Employment Service.
3. An opportunity for members of the armed services to get further education or trade training at the cost of their Government.
4. Allowance of credit to all members of the armed forces, under unemployment compensation and Federal old-age and survivors' insurance, for their period of service. For these purposes they should be treated as if they had continued their employment in private industry.
5. Improved and liberalized provisions for hospitalization, rehabilitation and medical care of disabled members of the armed forces and merchant marine.
6. Sufficient pensions for disabled members of the armed forces

Your Government is drawing up other serious, constructive plans for certain immediate forward moves. They concern food, manpower and other domestic problems, but they tie in with our armed forces. Within a few weeks I shall speak with you again in regard to definite actions to be taken by the Executive Branch of the Government and specific recommendations for new legislation by the Congress.

All our calculations for the future, however, must be based on clear understanding of the problems involved. And that can be gained only by straight thinking—not guesswork or political manipulation.

Fight Must Continue

I confess that I myself am sometimes bewildered by conflicting statements that I see in the press. One day I read an "authoritative" statement that we shall win the war this year, 1943—and the next day comes another statement equally "authoritative," that the war will still be going on in 1949.

Of course both extremes—of optimism and pessimism — are wrong.

The length of the war will depend upon the uninterrupted continuance of an all-out effort on the fighting fronts and here at home. The effort is all one.

The American soldier does not like the necessity of waging war. And yet—if he lays off for one single instant he may lose his own life and sacrifice the lives of his comrades.

By the same token—a worker here at home may not like the driving, wartime conditions under which he has to work or live. And yet—if he gets complacent or indifferent and slacks on his job he, too, may sacrifice the lives of American soldiers and contribute to the loss of an important battle.

The next time anyone says to you that this war is "in the bag" and "it's all over but the shouting," you should ask him these questions:

"Are you working full time on your job?"

"Are you growing all the food you can?"

"Are you buying your limit of war bonds?"

"Are you loyally, cheerfully cooperating with your Government in preventing inflation and profiteering and in making rationing work with fairness to all?"

"Because—if your answer is 'no'—then the war is going to last a lot longer than you think."

The plans we made for the knocking out of Mussolini and his gang have largely succeeded. But we still have to knock out Hitler and his gang and Tojo and his gang. No one of us pretends that this will be an easy matter.

We still have to defeat Hitler and Tojo on their own home grounds. But this will require a far greater concentration of our national energy and our ingenuity and our skill.

It is not too much to say that we must pour into this war the entire strength and intelligence and will power of the United States. We are a great nation—a rich nation—but we are not so great or so rich that we can afford to waste our substance or the lives of our men by relaxing along the way.

We shall not settle for less than total victory. That is the determination of every American on the fighting fronts. That must be, and will be, the determination of every American here at home.

Roosevelt Calls For Total Victory

pening in Sicily and said we were determined to rescue the peoples conquered by the Axis militarists and to endow them with the Four Freedoms—freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom from want and freedom from fear.

"We have started to make good on that promise," he said. "I am sorry if I step on the toes of those Americans who, playing party politics at home, call that kind of foreign policy 'crazy altruism' and 'starry-eyed dreaming.'"

The President took a look at all the major fronts, praised our allies, and said that there were "bigger fights ahead of us." We still have to knock out Hitler and his gang and Tojo and his gang, he said, and no one pretends that this will be an easy matter.

As for the length of the war, he said he had to confess that he was sometimes bewildered by the conflicting statements he saw in the press. One day, he said, he reads that it will all be over in 1943, and the next he finds that it is going to continue to 1949—an allusion to Vice Admiral Horne's statement that the Navy's plans are based on a war of that duration.

Both Extremes Wrong, He Says

"Of course," said the President, "both extremes—of optimism and pessimism—are wrong."

The length of the war, he said, would depend on the uninterrupted continuance of all-out effort on the fighting fronts and here at home. The effort, he emphasized, is all one.

Turning to Japan, he said confidently that our war of attrition against the Japs will drive them back from their over-extended line running from Burma to the Solomon Islands. He said there was good reason to believe that their shipping and air power could not support these outposts.

Mr. Roosevelt agreed that we were still far from our main objectives in the Far East, but he said we were pushing ahead and he foresaw the day when we would hold positions from which we could attack the heart of Japan "from the north, from the south, from the east, and from the west."

Many of the President's auditors must have wondered whether he was visualizing air bases in Siberia, now denied to us because Russia is neutral against Japan.

The President paid his respects to those at home who "grouse and complain," and told them they ought to learn some lessons from the civilians in Britain, China and Russia.

Plans for Returning Veterans

He announced that he would ask Congress to help him with plans for the return to civilian life of our gallant men and women in the armed services. He said they must not come home to inflation and unemployment, to a place on a bread line or on a corner selling apples.

He outlined a 6-point program which embraced mustering-out pay large enough to carry former service people until they can get jobs; unemployment insurance for those who have trouble getting jobs; an opportunity for further education or trade training at Government expense; allowance of credit to all members of the armed forces, under employment compensation and Federal old-age insurance, as if they had continued their employment in private industry; improved and liberalized provisions for hospitalization and medical care, and sufficient pensions for all the disabled.

Motorists Help To Bomb the Axis, Roosevelt Says

President Roosevelt last night offered gasoline-rationed motorists the consolation that they were helping to bomb the Axis.

He said in his radio address that every trip of a Flying Fortress from North Africa to bomb Naples required 1110 gallons of fuel, "the equal of about 375 A ration tickets——enough gas to drive your car five times across this continent."

"You will better understand your part in the war—and what gasoline rationing means—if you multiply this by the gasoline needs of thousands of planes and hundreds of thousands of jeps, trucks and tanks now serving overseas," he said.

WLB Has Hearing In Chrysler Case

By the Associated Press

Branding as "intolerable" the sporadic work stoppages which have beset plants of the Chrysler Corp., War Labor Board Vice Chairman George W. Taylor stated yesterday that WLB wants "something set up so there won't be any stoppages any more."

Taylor made his comment during a WLB hearing at which the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers accused Chrysler of attempting to incite violations of labor's no-strike pledge, and the corporation retorted that the U. A. W. leadership is "irresponsible" and beset by internal union politics.

It was believed that Taylor was hinting that the board would order the corporation and union to appoint an impartial umpire to settle their differences under collective bargaining contracts—a recommendation made by a special board panel.

The panel also recommended that the union be granted union maintenance and checkoff of union dues. The company opposed all recommendations of the panel. Approximately 60,000 workers are affected.

Company Accused

R. J. Thomas, president of the union, told the board the company had "surreptitiously" circulated a pamphlet "falsely assailing the union" and misrepresenting its position. He cited the pamphlet as "a fair example of Chrysler Corp.'s irresponsibility in dealing with labor and the WLB."

Nicholas Kelley, vice president and general counsel for the company, claimed the panel's recommendations ignored evidence that "proved the union's continued irresponsibility and antagonism" and indicated that "the union's difficulties arise from jealousies and politics within the union."

Kelley accused the union of having violated past contracts providing for no strikes and claimed that 98 violations occurred since Pearl Harbor. The union, he said, "deliberately set about sabotaging the grievance procedure to strengthen its demand for compulsory arbitration."

Hearing Concluded

Concluding the hearing, Taylor commented that regardless of which side was responsible for work stoppages at the Chrysler plants "the Nation has lost some pretty vital war materials as a result of what has transpired."

"I think both sides in this case have no reason to be proud at their failure to fully utilize the machine that this corporation has set up for producing goods for this Nation," he added. "It is not a proud record and I think that is what this board is interested in. We don't want any more stoppages at Chrysler. . . . We want something set up so there won't be any stoppages any more."

Taft Assails Treasury Blow at Pension Trusts

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio charged yesterday that regulations recently issued by the Treasury "attempting to nullify the employes' pension trusts of many important companies" are themselves invalid and violate the Revenue Act of 1942.

Taft said the last tax law, while it sought to remove pension trust abuses, "provided expressly that a trust should not be invalid merely because it excluded employes receiving $3000 a year and less, if it included substantially all employes receiving more than that amount."

"Some of the Treasury officials decided, however, that they would hold such a trust to be invalid if it treated the employes in the trust better than the Social Security Act treats the employes receiving less than $3000 a year," said Taft.

The Ohio Republican said that as soon as Congress reconvenes he will introduce a joint resolution nullifying the effect of the Treasury regulations and extending until December 31, 1944, the time in which existing pension trusts may be conformed to the new law.

One of the amendments to be offered by Taft will provide that "in determining whether a (pension) plan is discriminatory the commissioner shall only consider the relative benefits to those included in the plan, and shall in no way consider the amount or other characteristics of the benefits received under the Social Security Act or otherwise by employes excluded from the plan under the authority herein conferred."

Taft said that Treasury officials consulted the Senate Finance Subcommittee on the meaning of the tax bill's pension trust provisions, and were advised that regardless of the merits of their proposal, there was nothing in the act which authorized the Treasury to require employes' pension trusts to be integrated, or even compared with the provisions of the Social Security Act.

"Nevertheless," said the Senator, "Congress had no sooner adjourned than regulations were issued in direct defiance of the committee's opinion and the clear meaning of the act."

"THE type of travel represented by trips home for the week end, trips to other cities to visit friends, and other trips for social or pleasure purposes, is strictly non-essential and should cease," says Joseph B. Eastman, Director Office of Defense Transportation.

Organized troop movements take a large part of the passenger cars. With the cars left the railroads must carry every other sort of essential travel—soldiers, sailors, marines and coast guards on furlough—families visiting servicemen in camp—businessmen and other workers on war business.

The Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad today carries 80 per cent more passengers than last year, nearly five times the traffic carried in 1940, just before the war.

Furlough travel at times is so heavy that we find it necessary to discontinue the sale of tickets for some trains. Often even standing room is not available.

Every patriotic American is urged to be SURE his trip is necessary before he buys a ticket. Please do not make non-essential trips, but if you MUST go travel if possible on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday; limit your hand baggage to actual requirements; other baggage can be checked, and if your plans are changed cancel your reservations promptly.

We will appreciate your patriotic co-operation, and we know you will understand.

Catalyst

Before he could drive the Axis out of North Africa and Sicily, General Eisenhower had to create an army. At the outset, he had only an assortment of troops—seasoned Britishers, ill-equipped Frenchmen, green Americans, men of varied training from a dozen different lands. He welded the armies of many nations into a United Nations army. When the history of the Mediterranean campaign comes to be written from the detached viewpoint of the future, we think that this achievement will be recorded as "Ike" Eisenhower's great and distinctive contribution to the winning of the war.

There's a new story about Eisenhower which we like because it sheds a little additional light on how his mind works. He had two French orderlies of conflicting political outlooks who engaged in constant squabbling. So the general, one fine day, put the two men to work cleaning the windows of a large building. He told them to clean the same window, at the same time—one inside and one out—without breaking any glass.

The Frenchmen went to work openly sneering at one another. They manifested their mutual distaste, through the pane, by gesture, derision, facial contortions and all the eloquent language of signs. After a time, however, they began to look ludicrous even to themselves. One of them grinned; the other laughed outright. And when they at last finished the job they went off together for a friendly cup of coffee.

It wasn't a new idea of Eisenhower's. Perhaps it has been done many times before. The point is that this American general, with a sense of the indispensability of Allied unity, has been applying it in various forms to amalgamate all of the differences gathered together under his command. He has acted as a great catalyzing force.

Scapegoats Of Victory

The summer season's strangest controversy seems to be raging round the question of who's responsible for the Nation's war effort. Secretary Harold Ickes says it's all due to a lot of imported dollar-a-year big business magnates and that New Dealers are now a species as nearly extinct as the Stuka. This has enraged a number of people who might have been expected to find great pleasure in it. Their contention is that the New Dealers continue to sit in the seats of the mighty and should therefore be held accountable for everything.

The interesting thing is that neither Mr. Ickes nor his critics seems to have figured out whether the incumbents, whatever their labels, merit blame or praise. If they were to do this, it is quite possible that they would switch their contentions. You would think, to listen to them, that the Nation is on the brink of disaster and defeat, engulfed in chaos, mired down in its own managerial ineptitude. Yet all this disavowal of responsibility has been made just prior to the virtual collapse of one of our enemies, at a time when we have seized the initiative from the Nazis and have at least effectively arrested the Japanese offensive in the Pacific.

It is true, to be sure, that in our domestic affairs we are at some distance from the millennium. We have fallen far short of perfection in the distribution of our food supplies, in the allocation of our manpower, in the apportionment of our raw materials and in the general control of our exceedingly complex economy. Still, the record can scarcely be characterized as one of unredeemed failure. On the credit side, it is perhaps worth noting that we have raised, equipped and trained by far the largest Army in our history. Indeed, although we have been at war a bare 20 months, we have even managed to ship some two million soldiers overseas, where they have given a not wholly discreditable account of themselves.

The disputants in this curious controversy have apparently ignored the fact that, despite our shortcomings, we have achieved a production record which historians may not consider altogether contemptible. A rather tidy quantity of planes, ships, guns and ammunition has issued from our yards and factories. It is not entirely negligible that we have shipped something in excess of 11 billion dollars worth of lend-lease aid to our allies. Members of Congress have gone so far as openly to praise the Board of Economic Warfare on the grounds that it has been rather effective in depriving our enemies of strategic materials all over the world. Somehow or other, in the face of all our bungling, we have substantially stepped up our agricultural output, our production of minerals and our development of synthetic substitutes for the essential raw materials to which the enemy has denied us access.

These achievements, piddling though they may appear to be, can fairly be said to mitigate, in some small measure, the monstrosity of the domestic deprivations we have been compelled to suffer. At least they warrant an eschewal of utter despair. It even begins to seem possible that the Nation will survive. One wonders why the New Dealers and the businessmen alike are so eager to escape the blame that they are even willing to refuse the credit. To which of them the credit properly belongs, we do not know. Perhaps, in the final accounting, there will be enough for both.

Good Tidings

It must have been a deep satisfaction to the President last night to turn chronicler. What a chronicle he had to tell! All America had already read most of it, but Mr. Roosevelt pieced the bits together, making a connected whole of the achievements of our magnificent fighting forces. He seemed to share, by what he said and by how he said it, the exhilaration which has now gripped the American people. It is the beginning of the end. That the President intends to realize this estimate of the situation in action was demonstrated by his emphasis on the need for careful planning of both demobilization and reconversion.

But the war still remains to be won. The President himself did his share as a soldier on the fighting front by his skillful references to Italy. He told of the Fascist betrayal of Italy. There was a ringing sound in his voice which will be heard all over Italy when he said, "We will have no truck with Fascism in any way, shape, or manner. We will permit no vestige of Fascism to remain." In these words the Italian people, who for 20 years have been serving as helots to one of the most corrupt regimes in all history, will get encouragement to uproot their hateful tyranny. Equally encouraging of a reaction against their German taskmasters will be Mr. Roosevelt's recital of German betrayal of the Italians. It is a story that was told in Libya. Nazi troops, with herrenvolk arrogance, took Italian supplies, and left the Italians to fend for themselves. Mr. Roosevelt spoke of similar conduct in Sicily. Motor equipment was stolen in such quantity as to leave the Italians no choice but surrender. The contempt with which the President recounted the episode should help to spur the Italian people against the predatory Nazis in their midst.

The prospect of total victory—and, as the President said, we shall settle for nothing less—glowed in the President's tale of our accomplishments. He distributed the praise equally to the men in the lines and the men and the women behind them. There was a significant reference to the teamwork exemplified in the Italian campaign among the Allies and among the arms of the fighting services. Nothing could be more significant than this teamwork. It affords the best hope for unity in securing an ampler life in the world that is now aborning. At home the President singled out shipbuilding for special mention. It was "unbelievable." There is certainly no other word for it. Only a short time ago we were crying aloud our lack of transport bottoms. Now the problem is to get enough cargoes to fill the proliferating ships that are now coming so fast down the ways. The President didn't mention it, but in June we launched 46 per cent more vessels than we built in all 1941.

In the Pacific the outlook is almost equally bright. Evidently the President brushes aside the jeremiahs in the Navy Department who see us still fighting Japan in 1949. "If the Japanese," he said, "are basing their future plans for the Pacific on a long period in which they will be permitted to consolidate and exploit their conquered resources, they had better start revising their plans."

There was a collection of glad tidings in the President's bracing discourse. He added his own tidbit of good cheer in the announcement that coffee is now off the ration list and that more sugar will soon be available. As to the future, what he had to say about the plans for postwar demobilization must be left for review till they are rounded out by specific proposals. All in all, the talk was the honest record and the true picture that the American people are entitled to. As a democracy they must be given enough data to help them form an intelligent view of what is happening. This the President did. We can return his confidence by obeying his injunction not to indulge in either celebration or relaxation. The last lap in any race is often the hardest, and this will be. Moreover, speedy victory is what we need for the sake of humanity and for the sake of our civilization. It can be won only by continuing to lead the strenuous life.

Italy And Germany

One of the many roundabout reports of what allegedly happened in Italy on the eve of last Sunday's spectacular overturn suggests that the reason for Mussolini's resignation was Hitler's refusal to defend all of Italy. According to this story, Mussolini informed the Fascist Grand Council at its meeting last Saturday that Hitler proposed that all of southern and central Italy be abandoned and that a new Italian defense line be established in the north. Instead of approving this plan, the Fascist Grand Council, on motion of former Ambassador Grandi, proposed that the reins of government be turned over to King Victor Emmanuel.

The story is unverified. But there can be little doubt that one factor that led to the upset in Italy was Germany's demonstrated inability to defend that kingdom. This was proved in Tunisia early this year, in Sicily later though German troops are still clinging desperately to Catania—and in the air over Italy. Allied bombers have had it practically all their own way at Naples, Leghorn, Bologna and Rome—to mention but a few of the cities in Italy singled out for aerial bombardment by the Allies. Yet Italy's importance to Germany has been and remains so great that the only explanation that makes any sense for the weakness of Italian defenses is that Germany simply lacks the men, and particularly the planes, for an all-out defense of the kingdom. That being the case, and given the absence of any effective defensible line in north Italy, it is doubtful whether the Germans, even with Italian assistance, could put up more than a last-ditch stand in the Po Valley. At most that could delay the complete Allied triumph in Italy. It could not prevent it.

Nonetheless, we can be sure that the Germans are doing everything that is in their power to prevent Italy from capitulating to the Allies. And Hitler still has a few negative cards to play. In control of Balkan communications, he can place obstacles in the path of the return to Italy of the Italian garrisons in the Balkans. He can threaten Italy's great industrial centers in the north with bombardment from bases much closer than are the Allied bases in England and North Africa. And there are between 500,000 and one million Italian workers in Germany who today find themselves in the position of hostages. On the other hand, it is doubtful whether Hitler today is in any position to occupy Italy, particularly if, as now begins to appear, that country is in a state of latent rebellion, with the people demanding peace at any price. Great as are Marshal Badoglio's headaches, they are fully matched by those of Hitler.

Simplify Taxes

Few people realize the trouble that lies ahead of them as a result of passage of pay-as-you-go tax legislation. The change itself is unquestionably to the advantage of the taxpayer and the Government. However, Prof. Harley L. Lutz, well-known tax expert, points out that the new withholding tax introduced to aid current collection has further complicated an already needlessly complicated tax structure. He strongly urges simplification of procedures, not merely as a measure of relief for the harried taxpayer and the overburdened Bureau of Internal Revenue but also as a protection against the growth of resistance to tax payments.

No doubt popular approval of the withholding tax method of collection was attributable largely to a widespread belief that the change would make complicated tax declarations unnecessary and automatically put taxpayers on a current basis in respect to tax liabilities. Most of these deluded people are due for severe shocks. Very few taxpayers will find themselves fully paid up by the end of this year. Moreover, Professor Lutz points out that all taxpayers will have to file March returns covering the incomes of the previous year and the estimated income of the current year. He further reminds us that during the present year taxpayers must try to pay enough in September and December to make certain that their total tax payments in 1943 (including taxes withheld at source) are equal to the greater of the taxes for 1942 or 1943. Any deficiencies occasioned by inaccurate guesses must be paid into the Treasury by next March, along with additional taxes equal to 12½ per cent of the lesser tax total, 1942 or 1943.

The disgust and disappointment that will be felt when the public becomes fully aware of the complications that lie ahead may have a very demoralizing effect upon taxpayer morale. For that reason in particular Professor Lutz appeals for simplification of the present system to "prevent a normal resistance to needless confusion and red tape from developing into a resistance to the taxes themselves."

This threefold program calls for (1) absorption of the victory tax rate into the withholding tax rate; (2) designation of this new withholding tax rate as the normal tax rates, and (3) elimination of the requirement to file year-end returns when income is derived exclusively from wages and salaries and there is no liability for surtaxes. In support of this third and especially important demand, Professor Lutz explains that there are an estimated 30 million persons whose wages and salaries do not put them beyond the first surtax bracket of net income. Consequently merger of all taxes payable by this group into one comprehensive withholding tax would result in covering all their liabilities by collection at source, and relieve the Treasury from an appalling amount of paper work.

Changes of this sort are imperatively needed to remove the red tape which threatens to entangle millions of hapless taxpayers. Professor Lutz' fears that the present setup will produce a crop of resentful taxpayers will without doubt be realized if Congress fails to take prompt action along suggested lines.

PRISONER'S SONG

To east, the skyey wall stands up,
To west another wall of sky,
To north, to south, it is the same:
Unscalable and blue and high—
And, in the prison-yard, am I;

Knowing that there is no escape,
(Who ever scaled a wall so sheer?)
Forgetful, too, of how it was
Outside, before they brought me here,
From—where? . . . And in what grievous year?

There's tunnelling done, as I have heard,
At times, and some we knew before
We do not see again, but none
Knows what they found beneath the floor,—
Or if they reached an outer door.

America At War

By Selden Menefee

Industrial Morale

THE LAG in war production during May and June has been blamed on "complacency" by Secretary of the Navy Knox and others. This is a plausible explanation: the war is going well, therefore we are relaxing in our efforts.

But the complacency theme diverts attention from two danger signals of low industrial morale—strikes and high labor turnover. In May some 1,275,000 man-days of work were lost in strikes, or three times as many as in May 1942. The June figure, which includes two coal strikes, will be one of the highest in our history.

Labor turnover is less dramatic, but it probably has more effect on war production than strikes and absenteeism put together. A good example of how it works is the Boeing Aircraft Corporation of Seattle.

Some time ago I described how the long-delayed decision of the War Labor Board to increase Boeing workers only 4½ cents an hour caused great bitterness among them, and a general exodus to other industries despite the freezing of workers on war jobs. The reasons: prices had soared disproportionately in the booming Seattle area, and shipyard wage scales were much higher than those at Boeing's.

News From Seattle

Now comes news from Seattle that Boeing's is suffering an actual deficit of 9,000 workers. Production of much-needed Flying Fortresses has fallen off, and the War Department has threatened to cancel forty million dollars in Army contracts with smaller companies in the area, to release workers for the four huge Boeing plants.

Joseph B. Keenan, laborite vice chairman of WPB, made a hurried trip to Seattle and got A. F. L. union leaders to agree to a 10-hour day with overtime for the extra two hours. The local unions, however, voted against the proposal almost unanimously last week.

The Seattle Chamber of Commerce is carrying on a recruiting drive, in an attempt to avert the loss of war contracts in the smaller industries. Since no housing is available for workers from the outside, the bottom of the local manpower barrel is being scraped.

The real story behind this manpower crisis, however, has not been told. A Seattle writer got part of it by interviewing a number of Boeing workers. Here are a few of the things they said:

"Good God, doesn't the Government realize that production could be maintained even with our reduced personnel if at least 25 per cent of the workers weren't trying to get fired? The only way to get released is to be fired with prejudice. And our experienced workers wouldn't want to leave if their wages were on a par with shipyard wages."

Two-Shift Plan

"The way my shop figures it, under the two-shift plan we would have to work 10 hours and with overtime get paid for 11, in order to get as much as we would on an 8-hour day anywhere else. And all the time having patriotism shoved down our throats. We're working hard and doing a good job. We got the Army-Navy E, didn't we? All we ask is a fair deal."

"The 'white jackets' (supervisory workers) are getting another $35 raise on August 1. That makes $85 a month in raises they've had in the last two years, while the WLB gave us about $7.80 a month. And the white jackets get two weeks' vacation, while very few of us get even one week. They come back nice and brown, and come rushing into the shop with tales of their fishing and swimming. Makes us sore."

Not a pretty picture, but there it is: low morale, caused by dissatisfaction over apparent inequalities in the wage structure. This is the sort of feeling that results in strikes, absenteeism, high labor turnover and low production.

There are at least three possible solutions:

1. A general wage increase in plants like Boeing's. But this is ruled out by the "Little Steel" formula, at least until OPA has had its chance to roll back prices.

2. A longer work day—the course advocated by Boeing's and the WPB representative. But the workers rejected this, even though it seemed the only way to get their much-needed raise. At best it was an inflationary way of getting around the WLB wage policy. It would have amounted to about a 27 per cent increase in weekly wages, while production would have risen very little because of increased fatigue and absenteeism (especially among women workers, who are nearly half of the labor force).

3. The incentive wage plan—noninflationary method of increasing wages as production goes up. The War Labor Board has approved this system, up to a maximum wage increase of 35 per cent. The unions which have tried it heartily indorse the plan, as do most employers, for it has nearly always resulted in an increase of 20 to 30 per cent in production.

The incentive plan, introduced by labor-management production committees, provides the best answer to morale and production problems in such war plants as Boeing's.

Italy In Transition

By Barnet Nover

Between The Dark And The Daylight

UNTIL ITALY surrenders, the Italian problem will remain overwhelmingly a military problem for the Allies. It will only become a political problem for us when that surrender has actually occurred.

From a military point of view, it is immaterial who is in power in Rome at this time, so long as they are in a position to carry out the terms of surrender. This may have been in Churchill's mind when he told the House of Commons on Tuesday:

"It would be a grave mistake when Italian affairs are in this flexible, fluid and formative condition for the rescuing powers of Britain and the United States so to act as to break down the whole structure and expression of the Italian state. We certainly do not seek to reduce Italian life to a condition of chaos and anarchy, and find ourselves without any authority with whom to deal."

INDEED, from the long-range point of view, it may be far better to have the Italian offer of capitulation come, when it does come, from a government controlled by Fascist and quasi-Fascist elements; that is, from elements who share with Mussolini the responsibility for bringing Italy into the war, than from a government controlled by opposition forces.

In 1918 it was not the Kaiser and not Hindenburg and Ludendorff who signed the armistice, but representatives of the German Republic which had been proclaimed two days earlier.

The myth of the "stab in the back" which Hitler was later to capitalize so effectively came into being that day.

The German militarists who had been responsible for the war and its conduct washed their hands of all blame for the defeat and its consequences. Blame for the debacle was placed on the democrats who made peace.

THE BADOGLIO regime in Italy represents no radical departure from the Fascist government it has displaced. It is a receivership operated by minority stockholders of a completely bankrupt enterprise.

Its popular acceptance—so far as it is being accepted, and on that point no one can speak with any certainty—rests on the fact that its establishment is believed to foreshadow a liquidation of fascism and an end to the war.

If this is not done it is doubtful whether the regime can survive. Undoubtedly Badoglio knows this. But so far as can be judged by the actions of his government during its first days in office his plan is to destroy fascism while preserving the Fascists—that is all but a few too conspicuous to retain—and to seek for terms of peace better than those that Mussolini could possibly have secured.

BLONDEL crossing Niagara on a tightrope had no more difficult job than that which confronts Badoglio. Blondel succeeded. Badoglio's success is problematical.

The collapse of Mussolini has shaken all of Italy's traditional institutions, including the monarchy and the army, to their foundations. For all of them in some measure or other participated in the conspiracy that foisted fascism on Italy and all of them did not hesitate to support Mussolini when there were personal or group advantages to be derived from that support.

Having eaten the filling of the pie, these elements now hope to save the crust.

ITALY'S internal problem does not, at the moment, concern us except insofar as it has any bearing on the problem of getting Italy out of the war.

If Badoglio is sufficiently in control of the situation to make peace with the Allies, there is every reason why we should deal with Badoglio. But it is all the more imperative that our leaders should repeat and repeat and repeat that the only terms we are prepared to offer are those of unconditional surrender.

Given such a surrender and the Italian people themselves will be assured that their political future will not be prejudiced by any Allied commitments to the elements that were in control of the Rome government at the time of capitulation. And in view of what happened in North Africa the Allied peoples need a similar assurance, too.

BADOGLIO'S first act after taking office was to announce that "the war goes on."

Some profess to see in that statement an attempt by Badoglio to disarm the Germans so that they will not try to occupy the Italian peninsula. Others believe that the phrase should be taken literally and that Italy, though rid of Mussolini, will fight on. There is a third possibility that Badoglio is merely trying to hold a club over the Allies so as to get them to climb down from their demands for unconditional surrender.

If this is Badoglio's strategy he may well ponder Churchill's warning that . . . "The only consequence will be that in the next few months Italy will be seared and scarred and blackened from one end to the other."

There was a time when even had Italy wanted to make peace she could not do so because she had more to fear from Germany than from the Allies. The shoe is now on the other foot.

Young People

Please help us to prove that young people can bend their efforts to break the Axis instead of the law. Thanks to your paper and the radio, we Washington boys and girls have been able to hold four successful bond drives in which there were raised the cost of a bomber, a Flying Fortress and several pursuit planes.

Our losses on July 4th, has made us decide that we would much rather bring our boys back sooner from the front than have a vacation. We are now spending our money on bonds and using our time to solicit bonds to replace our losses of last Independence Day, so that next July 4th may be spent in peace with our boys back in the good old U. S. A.

We want to give each one a chance to have a share in this replacement. As soon as we have a substantial sum, we will hold a free dance to turn over the bonds to the Treasury and the stamps to the Postoffice officials as we have done in the past.

Hoping you will give up a chance to have this appeal to the public in your paper, and thanking you in advance because we know that your aid will bring us closer to our goal, we remain

Businessmen

When Mr. Ickes blames the inept and clumsy handling of the war on the businessman then he glosses over the record. The one job for which the businessman has been primarily responsible has been well done—the production of machines and munitions for war.

But let Mr. Ickes say whether it was a businessman or one of the Inner Circle who has muddled the policies of the OPA until the public is hopelessly bewildered; who has advised and seconded the President in a sparring match where John L. Lewis won; who tried to prevent the passage of wartime strike legislation; who has counseled the President to heap bureau on bureau, thus to divide the responsibility and tangle the home front hopelessly?

Bombs On Rome

It did my heart good to read the letter published in The Post of July 23, defending the bombing of Rome, the Fascist capital, by the United States Army Air Force. The writer, Commander Downey, who describes himself as an "Irish Roman Catholic," has indeed done much to separate the "substance" from the "shadow."

In the process of defending Christianity from its totalitarian enemies, it may be necessary that a few church edifices and monuments be destroyed. Sadder still, it may be unavoidably necessary to deprive some innocent humble individuals of their human lives. But why should the United Nations be put on the defensive in this matter; why should certain sections of the press be so nervously self-conscious? The facts in the case are clear to all who are not under the spell of totalitarianism of one form or another, and the justification of the act is obvious.

Let Jimmy Doolittle do it again, unless the Fascists declare Rome an "open city" and make it one in fact by removing all military objectives.

A. E. H.

It may turn out that America's bombing of Rome may prove to have been a great tactical blunder, just another one of Roosevelt's mistakes. There are about 400,000,000 Catholics in the world, of every race, color and condition. The Church of Rome is truly universal, and its very name "Catholic" means universal. In bombing the Eternal City we strike at the very heart of Catholicism, we bring destruction upon parts of the Holy City, dear to the hearts of the multitude of Catholics throughout the length and breadth of the earth. What will they feel toward the country that destroyed the basilica of San Lorenzo, and brought grief to the heart of the holy father?

It remains to be seen whether such military advantages as may accrue to us from the bombings of Rome are not far outweighed by other factors, detrimental to the prestige and popularity of the United States.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Life of Mussolini

Mussolini was once a tramp. Now he is twice a tramp. Forty years ago he was thrown off a caboose in Switzerland by railroad coppers. But that time he was able to get up.

His father was a village blacksmith, and Benito was born with a bellows in his mouth. His dad had biceps like iron in his arms, but Benito had them in his throat.

Papa Mussolini shod horses but Benito was no help. He would always try to talk a horse out of the the idea it needed shoes and convince it that it would look better in patent leather boots.

Benito was supposed to shoo flies but he preferred to outbuzz them.

He never cared for the anvil or forge, finding it impossible to talk into an anvil or play recordings of his own voice in a forge. So he quit.

Pop, whose front name was Allessandro, also kept a saloon. This proves there were always queer ideas in the family. It is the only recorded case where a blacksmith alternately cried "Whoa!" "Back up!" and "What'll you have?" with no change of voice.

All this made the picture pretty confusing in Benito's boyhood. He would often find a teamster's horse in the barroom saying, "I'll take a cigar this time, pop," while the teamster was entering the blacksmith shop on all fours and demanding drinks for everybody in the house.

As a young man he ran away to Switzerland. He started out with a quarter. No man ever went farther on two bits up to last Sunday afternoon.

He became soapbox orator. Discovering that people were crazy enough to think they knew what he was talking about, he never stopped talking. He became a newspaper publisher. Benito ran his own picture in the paper and the sheet went big because the public always goes for funnies.

He fought in the World War, improving his diction by threatening superior officers. After the war he came out with a program for saving Italy through a sustaining radio program. It was the only case up to that time of a man being his own radio artist and sponsor.

Before he was on the air a week he had sold 10,000 cases of baloney, all to new customers, and stimulated on international [illegible] mand.

That was the beginning of the unfortunate era when a man with a good radio voice could always get [illegible] anywhere. When the march on Rome began Benito wound up in front. (That was before there were female drum-majors.—Ed note.)

King Emmanuel thought it was a premiere for an American movie comedy and named Benito headman before he found it wasn't all in fun. It took him 21 years to correct the mistake.

For 21 years he spoke only from high altitudes and announced himself as a new Caesar with vitamins and screeno prizes thrown in. Then he met Hitler and everything went black. And we don't mean blackshirt.

It is now reported he is thinking of going back to the combination blacksmith shop and saloon. It's a long time since the homefolks have seen a horse.

District's Good Name

Again the press reports that another gentlemen of the cloth has leveled an attack, while speaking to persons in other localities, which may be construed by them as an indictment upon the permanent citizens of the District of Columbia.

As a native and lifelong resident of the Nation's Capital, I most strenuously resent such implications and equally deny the people of the District of Columbia are responsible, if at all, for Washington being the "wettest and lousiest city in the country."

Our great trouble lies in the fact that Washington is like a tanglefoot fly paper—it catches people from all parts of the globe. These people have come here with diversified customs and ideas which they either attempt to force upon us, or, being away from home where they are well known, oftimes take advantage of being in a strange city and give vent to their possible long innermost desire to turn their heels to the sun and thereby bleach out their true character.

The traveling clergy can be of greater service to the citizens of the District of Columbia were they to tell the people back in the States how many of their former citizens are conducting themselves while sojourning here rather than brand this city as a cesspool for vice and its permanent citizens as moral perverts.

There is grave doubt that either Bishop Hughes or the Rev. Hastings or anyone else can actually prove it is the citizens of the District of Columbia who are responsible for whatever complaint they may have against the city, but the records of the Police Department will prove, on the other hand, it is the newcomers who are filling its record books with various sorts of law violations including parching throats and lice, too.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The King And Badoglio

IT IS evident from Mr. Churchill's speech that the formula of unconditional surrender is not a clear answer to the problem of Italy. For the formula means that Italy must stop fighting us, and must, without our having given pledges or made a bargain in advance, accept the conditions which we impose: she lays down her arms and throws herself upon the justice and mercy of the victors.

LIPPMANN

IF THAT were a full solution, there is scarcely any doubt that the King's government would surrender unconditionally. Nor would it have been necessary for Mr. Churchill to make his elaborate and powerful plea to the House of Commons for "the fullest freedom to act." For the problem would be very simple indeed if Italy could surrender, retire from the war, and then passively submit to our orders. The real problem, however, is not whether the Italians will surrender. It is how the Germans can be ousted from Italy, and how the Italian forces can be extricated from the Balkans and from France.

Passive submission under the formula of unconditional surrender does not solve this problem. The Italian government with which we come to "general conclusions" must not only cease to resist us, but must take a positive position followed by positive measures against the Germans who are in Italy. Thus the King and Marshal Badoglio cannot merely sue for peace with us. They have not only to rupture the alliance with Germany but to play some part in the war against Germany.

THAT, WE may suppose, is what Mr. Churchill had in mind when he said that "the unconditional surrender of Italy should be brought about wholesale and not piecemeal." It would not suit our interests, or those of Italy, if, for example, there were a King's government in Rome which had surrendered, and then in northern Italy the Italian administration continued to support a German occupation entrenched behind, say, the line of the River Po. This might be the situation which developed. But our paramount concern and guiding purpose must be to use the leverage we have obtained upon the Italian nation to prevent it.

Signat is the reason why we For suspend judgment in repard to the King and Badoglio, mowing as we know on Mr. hurchill's authority that there e no secret commitments to hat government: and then we must, as he promised, put Italy under relentless military pressure. The purpose of the pressure is to arouse to the highest possible pitch the Italian will to obtain peace. It is not enough that the Italians should amiably cease to fight us as they have in Sicily. We must want them to be so furiously insistent upon peace that they will rise against the Germans in their midst and will drive the King and Marshal Badoglio, or their successors, to wage a war of independence against the German invaders.

THERE IS no conflict between our immediate military interests and our longer political objectives. Only amateur realists and political incompetents get themselves into muddles where such conflicts develop. In the case of Italy, no such muddle need develop.

By exerting the utmost pressure upon the whole of Italy, we can excite such a desire for peace with us that resistance to the Germans in Italy will seem to the Italians the only quick and certain way to end the war. If, then, the King and Marshal Badoglio can rouse themselves from the lethargy of twenty years, and can lead the Italian resistance to Germany, they will have taken the decisive step toward preventing, in Mr. Churchill's words, the breakdown of "the whole structure and expression of the Italian State" into "a condition of chaos and anarchy."

THE QUESTION whether we can treat with the King's government through Marshal Badoglio can be answered only by the event. We must be careful, therefore, not to commit ourselves now for or against the new Italian government. If it can lead the whole Italian nation to resist and expel the Germans, then it is obviously the authority which we must deal with. For the occupation of the whole of Italy will serve our highest military interests. And if the King's government rests upon an Italian rebellion against the Axis and all it has entailed, it will conform with our political principles. For if the Italian people are aroused not only to liquidate fascism but also to oust the Germans, then we can trust this aroused people to restore their own liberties.

If, on the other hand, the new government is merely lethargic and passive, submitting to us where we are strong and to the Germans where they are strong—unable or unwilling to identify itself with a national uprising for independence and liberty—then it is a poor thing, to be held at arm's length and treated as a stop-gap, bound quickly to give way to another government.

MR. CHURCHILL would not have had to argue and plead for the confidence of the Allied world if confidence had not been so seriously shaken by the political mismanagement of our relations with France. His address said all that could possibly be said to give confidence in the determination of Italian policy. But it must be said that while in this case, unlike the other, the initial conception has been worked out, policies become what those down the line make them by their words and their acts.

Therefore, the confidence given cannot be given blindly, and the utmost vigilance must be exercised to see to it that those who use temporary expedients do not fall permanently in love with them, and that self-justification—even in face of an uninformed and unjust criticism—does not overwhelm the capacity for self-examination. For what a statesman of Mr. Churchill's genius and historical insight and magnanimity can conceive does not automatically become the controlling policy of men who do not have his genius, his insight, and his greatness of heart.

Ojeda Bares Nazi Method

Tells Peril to Americas

Dr. Carlos Dario Ojeda, Mexican member of the Emergency Advisory Committee for Political Defense, yesterday warned the Americas to be alert "because there still exists many subterranean currents of Nazi propaganda and espionage" in the Western Hemisphere.

Dr. Ojeda spoke at the State Department after Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Attorney General Francis Biddle had welcomed a delegation from the committee, which sits at Montevideo, Uruguay.

Dr. Ojeda, who is first vice president of the committee, said "we must remember that the Nazi agents always sow hate and disunion, turning the people against their government, and the governments against their allies, the one class against another.

Tells Nazi Method

"In order to propagate National Socialism, Germany is spending nearly 300 millions of dollars annually for the purpose of organizing Germans in foreign lands and to disseminate Nazi propaganda. This task is directed by the auslands organizations of the Nazi Party with its seat in Berlin, with 600 centers in foreign countries and 400,000 members."

He said that "because of this we ask all sons of the continent to remain alert. We appeal to the great continental press that it continue with its free speech and deep patriotism to combat and crush totalitarian propaganda, with its motorized prose and its ideas in uniforms."

Dr. Ojeda, speaking in Spanish, paid glowing tribute to President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

"Champions of Energy"

"We are guided," he said, "by the example of those champions of energy, President Roosevelt and Premier Churchill, who omit no effort or sacrifice of any sort to reach the farthest horizons in the service of humanity and to show us that the way to victory may be found only when we dedicate ourselves wholeheartedly to the task.

"The political defense of America is based on liberty and democracy through the channels of Pan-Americanism. If, in order to establish liberty, peace and democracy, a nation demands an equitable distribution of its weath, the peace of humanity requires a similar sacrifice from those powerful nations which are blessed with great fortunes. This attitude crowns the great American people who seek to make of America a real continental unit."

150 Millions Total of U. S. Stake in Italy

By the Associated Press

America's financial stake in war-weary Italy aggregates some $150,000,000—half of it in industrial properties—according to latest estimates available here.

Italian investments in the United States, on the other hand, represents only $55,000,000.

The Mussolini government in June, 1941, ordered registration of all Italian-held assets in retaliation for Washington action freezing Axis funds here. The registration order, was the last definite word on the American property.

Presumably the peace conference will take up these property tangles and Congress probably would have to act on the disposition of frozen alien assets for which there now are no governing laws.

Of the 75 million dollars of American money invested in Italian industry, according to Commerce Department estimates at the end of 1940, more than half—38 million dollars—was tied up in petroleum refining and distribution facilities; $13,500,000 in manufacturing industries and 11 million dollars in wholesale distribution facilities. The remainder was lumped under the head of "miscellaneous."

Americans also owned approximately 73 million dollars (par value) in Italian bonds, of which roughly 33 million dollars represented Italian government or government-guaranteed securities with the remainder in Italian corporate enterprises. American banks also had an estimated $1,500,000 in short-term banking funds in Italy.

Of Italian assets in this country, according to Commerce Department figures for 1941, about 40 million dollars represented investments in American industry and the remaining 15 million dollars short-term banking funds.

Joy at Lifting of Coffee Curb Pervades Reactions to Speech

COFFEE RATIONING ENDS—Jerry Grigby and Margie Cobert at Ceres

Interest of Mr. and Mrs. Average American in the swiftly moving world developments was demonstrated last night when groups of all nations paused throughout the city in bars, taxicabs, gasoline stations and barber shops to listen to the broadcast by the President and to toast the lifting of the rationing of coffee, which became effective at the start of his speech.

The majority were pleased with what the President said and all rejoiced at the news that coffee was to be a nonrationed commodity. Men, and women too, some with a Tom Collins before them, paused long enough to say, "Ah, I love coffee, too, but in the morning," when the President made his declaration.

An Italian, a Greek, a barber, a gasoline station attendant, a restaurant clerk who is a Russian, a newly-married couple and others contributed their bits to a hasty survey conducted in the principal downtown areas.

Newlyweds' Reaction

Mr. and Mrs. William Renick, he of the Coast Guard, of 1305 N Street Northwest, heard the speech while sitting in Garvin's Cafe on Fourteenth Street. "It was a swell speech," said Renick, "and the timing of the release of coffee with it was a master-stroke and good news for all of us." His wife was more practical. She was married, she said, only two months ago. They are from St. Louis and "now that coffee is not rationed any more I want to go to housekeeping so I can try my luck at it," she coyly smiled.

Mike Davis, a clerk at Garvin's, and a Russian, said the President hit the "nail on the head." The coffee situation made him so happy. In true Russian gesture he bowed and laughed, "I love coffee." He has three brothers in the Russian army, and being a linguist, master of seven languages, expects to be called on to assist in the war effort soon.

Edith Humes, 1309 Seventeenth Street Northwest, a cashier at O'Donnell's, paused long enough in changing a large bill to say: "I'm with the President 100 per cent and I don't want to see this country change horses in midstream."

Converted on Gas Ban

At the bar there was J. W. Millard, 3611 Thirty-ninth Street Northwest, an admitted convert on the gasoline situation. "The President's story about all those ships and men and vehicles that used gasoline in the occupation of Sicily has made me look with more favor on the pleasure driving ban. All in all, it was an enlightening speech, a good one."

J. L. Wright, 2034 V Street Northwest, a taxi driver, heard the speech in his cab in front of the Franklin Park Hotel on I Street Northwest. "What the President says is right," he said as he drove off with five women passengers who shouted "count us in on that, too."

Morris Smith, barber at Robinson's on Fourteenth Street Northwest, added a new line to slang. He said "the President was speaking right from the muscle and made a good impression."

Taxi Driver Dissents

Jack Newman, 1132 Tenth Street Northwest, proved himself a true patriot. "What liked best was the nonration coffee statement. I don't drink coffee myself but I know lots that do. I'm a milk drinker." He came here from Roanoke, Va., recently, he said.

R. W. Hopkins, 1343 Ives Place Southeast, a taxi driver, listened to the speech on E Street near Thirteenth Street Northwest. "I expected more, I thought it was a letdown. I expected more information on Italy and what we are going to do. I liked the part about the coffee."

Tony R. Masano, Italian extraction but native born with four years in the Army to his credit, said the President was nothing less than 100 per cent right in regards to Italy, as he palmed a piece of custard pie for a customer at Johnny's Lunch on E Street Northwest.

Applause at Ball Game

His coworker, Ernest Michael, a Greek, of 813 H Street Northeast, said the President had his full support and complete confidence. Then he added, with a smile, "Gee, I'm glad about the coffee, too."

But groups about the city were not the only ones to hear the address. Some 20,000 fans at the Washington-Chicago night game sat attentively while the President spoke and the game was delayed after the second inning.

The fans applauded when the President again demanded "unconditional surrender." Cheers echoed throughout the stadium when he praised the leadership of General "Ike" Eisenhower. But the President's announcement of the termination of coffee rationing produced a gasp of agreeable surprise. The crowd tittered when the President made reference to that "mystic master of strategic intuition, Herr Hitler."

Future Safe For Quinine

Seed Sent to Ecuador

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

To assure quinine sources in widely scattered localities and also as part of its good-neighbor policy, the United States Government has sent 110,000 cinchona seedlings into South and Central American countries in the last six months.

The seedlings are propagated at the Plant Introduction Garden at Glenn Dale, Md., operated by the Division of Plant Exploration and Introduction of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Soils and Agricultural Engineering.

B. Y. Morrison, who has charge of the propagation of the seedlings, said he has been growing them here for the last 12 years and some of the trees he sent to South or Central America are capable of producing quinine now.

Result of Jap Conquest

However, it was only after the Japanese took Java and cut off the principal supply of the essential drug that there has been any real interest in setting out groves of the seedlings in the tropical countries of the Western Hemisphere.

Morrison said it takes from 10 to 12 years for a tree to mature sufficiently to warrant stripping it of its bark to produce quinine. However, it is possible to produce a poor substitute for the pure drug by grinding up the entire tree when it is 3 years old.

At the same time there are being propagated at the Introduction Gardens the plants from which the highly efficient insect poison, rotenone, is made. Seedlings of these also will be given to our good neighbors to the south, he said.

Need Hot Climate Only

The cinochona trees grow in hot, high altitudes, he said, flourishing at altitudes of from 3000 to 9000 feet.

The quinine trees of Java were developed from seeds obtained in the wild state of Bolivia and it is particularly to that country Morrison is anxious to return his seedlings.

Other peculiar conditions necessary to the proper growth of trees include soil of an acid reaction, perfect drainage, 120 inches of rain a year and no dry spells. He said he had found it impossible to grow them successfully in this country and the only place they are to be found in any quanity is in the 33,000 square feet of the greenhouses he has devoted to them at Glenn Dale.

Nations Benefited

Countries where the seedlings have been sent are Nicaragua, El Salvador, Mexico, Brazil, Peru, Ecuador and Puerto Rico. The Puerto Rican climate is not well suited to the growth of the trees and the experiments there have not been too successful.

He is now anxious to interest Bolivia, Columbia and Costa Rico in planting some of them.

One of the American firms which became interested in developing its own quinine source has been Merck & Co., drug manufacturers and in consequence they now have some trees in Guatemala which are mature bue which they are saving to secure more seeds.

Dry Spell Hurts Crops

By Christine Sadler

Rain Badly Needed In The West

Food officials wrestling with supply and allocation problems in Washington yesterday had their attention called to a serious lack of rain in many sections of the Midwest farm belt and a need for more moisture in most parts of the country westward from the Middle Atlantic States.

The Weather Bureau in its weekly crop report said rain is needed to maintain growth in many localities and that some deterioration of crops already has taken place, particularly in the lower Great Plains area.

Heat Dries Up Soil

Above-normal temperatures were reported "drying" the soil rapidly in many central parts of the country. While the heat was declared highly favorable for rapid development of crops delayed by a late spring and early summer floods, it was taking its toll in areas without sufficient moisture to withstand it.

Stock water supplies were reported critically low in some Great Plains sections, and garden and truck crops suffering.

Chances for a normal food production this year depend largely on weather conditions for the remainder of the summer, the War Food Administration pointed out recently when its 1943 crop estimates showed the abnormally late spring had made serious cuts in the early prospects.

Meat Purchases Cut

Meantime the Food Distribution Agency yesterday announced it was curtailing its purchases of both beef and pork, thus augmenting the supplies that will be available to civilians.

Beef purchases by FDA this week were reduced from 45 to 30 per cent of choice steer and heifer intake at the large federally inspected plants, and future purchases will take but 40 per cent of the supply, it was said.

This percentage from the large plants amounts to only 18 per cent of the total beef supply, FDA said.

Hopeful Outlook

The overall beef supply from now through November should be very good, FDA said, as grass-feed cattle are beginning to come to market. Army and lend-lease requirements have been met without difficulty for the past several weeks, it was said, and civilians in most areas should expect an increase sufficient to insure them their full portions under rationing.

Although no percentage was given for the decrease in pork purchases by the Government, it was said they would be curtailed for most pork items, including lard. Pork also is coming to market in great quantities, although a seasonal decline in hog marketing can be anticipated for August.

The number of hogs entering 12 major markets this week already is up to 320,000, in comparison to 191,000 for the week a year ago. The Government's reduction should mean a greater amount of pork for civilians, if they want it, and also an increase in the frozen and cured reserves.

Italians Caught Crying 'Wolf' Once Too Often

The Italians were caught napping in the invasion of Sicily, an American general reported yesterday, because their intelligence officers cried "Wolf" too often.

Back from an observation trip to North Africa and Sicily, Maj. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, jr., chief of the armored command at Fort Knox, Ky., told a press conference that the Axis forces had received unmistakable reports that the attack was coming.

"One Italian general—he was very useful to us later—told us they had heard about the approaching invasion 20 days ahead," said Gillem. "They made preparations every night, but it began to get sort of tiresome, and along about the twentieth night the boys lost their enthusiasm for getting ready. That was the night we hit 'em."

Booby traps were more troublesome than mine fields and in at least one place—the Comiso air base—German soldiers dead on the field had mined as booby traps.

Capt. Charles W. Dean, chief training officer at Coast Guard headquarters in Washington, was graduation speaker.

PUC Asks Court To Kill OPA Plea In PEPCO Case

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday asked the District Court to dismiss an appeal taken by OPA Administrator Prentiss Brown against a ruling of the PUC refusing to order Potomac Electric Co. rates reduced to the figure asked by Federal agencies.

The basis for the motion was the decision of the United States Court of Appeals decision which supported the PUC in its refusal to order a slash in rates of the Washington Gas Light Co.

The Commission declined to order a cut in electric rates of two million dollars, but instead ordered a reduction of something more than $310,000. Brown then took the appeal.

The Court of Appeals decision asserted that the utilities commission had full power to regulate the rates of utilities companies in the District. It was on the basis of this decision that the dismissal of the appeal against the electric rate ruling was asked.

Corporal Gives Red Cross Blood For 7th Time

"It makes me feel as though I were in there fighting right alongside of the boys," Corpl. Daniel E. L. Ellis, 44, a limited service soldier at Fort Belvoir, Va., said yesterday after he had made his seventh donation to the American Red Cross Blood Bank.

He was commended as an "example to all men in uniform" by his commanding officer, Brig. Gen. Edwin H. Marks.

In praise of the Red Cross "Save a Buddy's Life" campaign, Ellis declared, "All the soldiers and civilians on this post and every post in the country should kick in with at least one point of blood. It's the swellest feeling in the world knowing you gave a little to the guys who are spilling lots of it over there."

WPB Permits Manufacturers To Raise Output of Some Shoes

Increased production of children's and infant's shoes and men's work shoes was authorized yesterday by the War Production Board.

The order permits a 25 per cent increase in the output of shoes for boys, misses, children and infants, a 15 per cent increase in production of men's work shoes, and a 25 per cent increase in men's safety shoes.

Despite rationing of most types, WPB said, the demand for children's and infants' footwear has been exceeding supply by a substantial margin.

The order also permits manufactureres of low priced misses' and children's shoes (selling under $2 at retail) to adjust their production in the low-price field. Previously, their proportionate output of various lines selling under $2 at retail had to conform to the pattern established in the base period. Now they will be able to center their production on any established line having a wholesale price up to $1.37½ (or $2 if sold at retail) if they so choose.

The effect of this change will be to permit greater production of shoes at a price level where a consumer demand exists for them and to give relief to manufacturers who found that there was no market for lower priced shoes within the range under rationing.

RCA Indicates Blue Network Will Be Sold

New York, July 28 (AP).—Sale of the Blue Network Co., Inc., by its owner, the Radio Corporation of America, was indicated today as a possibility before the end of the week.

Blue Nework officials, insisting that no contracts had been signed, acknowledged that Wall Street reports of active bidding in sums ranging up to eight million dollars were substantially correct. These reports said that an original bid of six million dollars had been made by James H. McGraw, jr., president and chairman of McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., and Edward J. Noble, chairman of Life Savers Corp. and owner of Station WMCA, New York.

Another report said Thomas P. Durell of Wall Street had bid 6½ million dollars, followed with a raise by the McGraw-Noble group to seven million dollars, and later with two additional increases to eight million dollars. Dillon, Read & Co. interests were said to have offered $7,800,000.

Mussolini Gave Italians 10 Years Of Peace But Took Their Freedom

The regimentation of Italy under Mussolini's dictatorship is described by the chief of the former Associated Press Bureau in Rome, in this third of four articles about "The Great Chin."

By Richard G. Massock

While thousands cheered and others groaned, Mussolini devoted himself for 10 years to dusting off Rome's former glory, shaking a semblance of efficiency into Italian life and promoting his personal power.

The first 10 years of his absolute dictatorship, 1925 to 1935, were relatively peaceful for the Italians who conformed to fascism.

Mussolini was busy with a program of domestic reforms to justify his dictatorship and building the fascist state to perpetuate it.

Among those who believed him the savior of the western world from bolshevism, it was easy to win further admiration by his forceful efforts to inject discipline into Italian life.

Others regarded him as an executive genius who got things done in a seemingly efficient manner.

Tourists Were Impressed

Italy was made safe and orderly, the tourists found. She was given a social and economic program that appeared promising.

For a decade, Italian national life showed to the casual observer an outward health and vigor it never before had enjoyed.

But the cost to the Italians was great indeed, for they lost two freedoms—freedom of speech and freedom from fear. They failed to gain another—freedom from want.

They retained only one, the freedom of religion. Mussolini was astute enough to realize the influence of the church on Italians. Although fascism and the Vatican were frequently in conflict, Mussolini made his peace in that sector with the Lateran accord of 1929, perhaps his only sound diplomatic achievement for Italy.

Mussolini became the state.

As its embodiment, he imposed social peace by outlawing strikes and lockouts. He expanded the railways and public works, the merchant marine, the highway system, the aqueducts and power plants.

He reclaimed thousands of acres, especially in the Pontine Marshes near Rome, to make new fields for the growing of crops.

Benefits for Workers

He gave the workers a labor charter, social insurance, summer camps for children. He provided schools for all.

Democratic countries, of course, were doing similar things without demanding such a sacrifice of the people's liberties.

Reassured by Mussolini that fascism was not an article of export, his admirers abroad excused fascism in Italy with the remark that its methods were needed there, although in the non-Italian countries, they said, such things were unthinkable.

Mussolini set up a super-regimented form of economic nationalism in a so-called corporative system, with employers' guilds, called corporations, and syndicates of workers, all under his state control through the Fascist Party.

The worker had to belong to a fascist syndicate to work. The employers had to accept a party control which reached into every phase of their industrial and commercial operations.

This government control, exercised through instruments of a single party, spawned a host of grafters, large and small.

The terrors of fascism appeared more or less latent by the end of its first decade, but it was there, always ready with its clubs, its castor oil and its arbitrary imprisonments.

Legalized His Personal Army

Mussolini legalized his personal army, the Fascist Militia—first such institution in the history of Europe, later the model for the Nazi Brown Shirts in Germany.

He set up a special tribunal. Its judges were officers of the militia, which tried anti-Fascists, with no appeal from its arbitrary sentences of banishment to towns in the interior of Italy or to the Lipari Islands off Sicily.

Detection of the anti-Fascists was the work of the militia and of the secret police, called the OVRA.

Mussolini was repeatedly the target of assassins.

In 1925 a General Zaniboni was convicted of setting up a rifle in a window from which he could fire on the Duce when Mussolini appeared on his balcony to address a crowd.

In 1926 an Irish woman fired a pistol at Mussolini during a ceremony in Rome, the bullet scratching his nose. A shot was fired at him from a crowd of cheering Black Shirts as they pressed around his open car in Bologna. An anarchist threw a bomb against Mussolini's car.

There were other abortive attempts, not always publicized, against his life.

The police repression of the people was tightened.

Government censorship of the press reduced the newspapers to servile collaboration with the regime, until the Fascist Party eventually controlled all the organs of opinion.

Mussolini regimented and disciplined the people until almost everybody was in some sort of uniform.

Boys were drilled in Fascist corps for the army service into which they were graduated.

The girls were put into uniforms, too, but they were drilled for motherhood, for Mussolini used all the persuasion of his dictatorial position and cash prizes as well for the propagation of offspring to make good his boast of eight million bayonets against any foe.

Education was molded in the Fascist pattern, with the textbooks rewritten to exalt the Duce, glorify war and distort history to suit the aims of the dictator's budding foreign policy.

Parliament became a rubber stamp, the Senate a club of political dodoes.

Mussolini gloried in the adulation of those about him. A master showman, in the gaudy manner of Italian opera, he affected uniforms that flattered his short, dumpy body. With bulging eyes and jutting chin, he shouted flamboyant phrases at a corralled audience from the balcony of his palace.

Liked to Exhibit Himself

He liked to exhibit himself, wielding a pick in the demolition of a slum block, forking wheat at threshing time in the "battle of the grain" (which he decreed to make Italy self-sufficient in food), driving a motorcycle, an automobile, a speedboat, an airplane.

But to be a Caesar, Mussolini had to pay the penalty of loneliness. Nobody ever has claimed to have been a dear and affectionate friend of the Duce. Mussolini never had one, so far as the records go, outside his family.

He rarely relaxed in the presence of others, always kept them at attention. Never a hand-shaker, he ordered the stiff salute of the outflung arm as the Fascist mode of greeting.

In his fondness for his children, he was the normal Italian parent. His daughter, Edda, was the apple of his eye; Bruno, who was killed in a bombing-plane accident, his favorite son. Yet his writings show that while he found lonely relaxation in playing his violin, he always exacted a more than filial respect from his three sons and two daughters when they were in his presence.

The qualities of the dictator were firmness of will, intelligence, knowledge of men, practical administrative ability, certainty of the rightness of his own judgment.

One thing he never would let be said of his person—that every day he was a little older and balder, and sometimes sick.

U. S. Flier Downs 15th Jap Plane And Leads Aces

Somewhere in New Guinea (Delayed), July 26 (AP).—First Lieut. Richard Bong of Poplar, Wis., stepped into the leadership as the premier fighter ace in the Southwest Pacific area during a spectacular battle with Japanese planes today.

Speedy P-38's attacked a formation of enemy bombers and fighters near Lae, New Guinea, and shot down 11, destroyed or possibly damaged at least five more planes.

The battle was highlighted by the performance of Bong and Capt. James Watkins of Crystal Springs, Miss., who shot down four planes apiece.

One of our Lightnings was shot down, but the pilot parachuted out and was believed safe.

Wounded Soldier Making Model Plane Hopes as He Recovers Use of Hand

By John Steinbeck

London.—The soldier wears a maroon bathrobe and pajamas and slippers, the uniform of the Army hospital. He is a little pale and shaky, the way convalescents are. His left arm he carries crooked and high, and the fingers of his left hand hook over helplessly. In front of him on a table is a half-built model of a Liberator. Not covered yet, but a mass of tiny struts and ribs and braces. And he has a sheet of balsa wood, stamped with the patterns, and he has a razor blade and a little bowl of glue, with a match sticking out of it.

"I got hurt in Africa," he says. "Got hit in the stomach, but they fixed that up pretty good." He holds up his left arm. "This is what bothers me," he says. "That was broken awful bad. I haven't been out of a cast long." He moves the fingers slightly. "Not much feeling in them," he says. "I can't make a fist. I can't grab ahold of anything. At least, I couldn't. It's kind of numb.

"I got hold of this model," he says. "I can hold things down with my hand, like this." He puts the side of his hand down on the sheet of balsa. "I did all of that with my right hand. I guess it's lucky I'm right-handed." He regards his left hand and moves the fingers. "The doctor says I'll be able to use it to grab hold of things if I just exercise it. But it's hard to exercise it when you can just barely feel it's there."

"A funny thing happened yesterday," he says. "Here, I'll show you the exact place." He takes a pencil and sticks it into the maze of tiny braces. "There, you see that piece in there? The one with the little pencil mark on it? I marked it so I'd remember which one it was.

"Yesterday I was trying to get that set in right, and you can see it's a hard place to get at. You've got to hold it here and work it up under. Well, I didn't even know I was doing it. I came to, and I was holding that little piece in my left hand." He regards the wizened finger with amazement. "I told the doctor about it and he said that was all right and I should try to use it every bit I could. Well, sir, when I think about it I can't do it. Not yet, anyway. Maybe I can later. A little bit at a time. I roll a pencil under my fingers. They say that's a good thing to do. I can feel it some, too."

He holds a sheet of balsa pattern down with the side of his left hand and with a razor blade carefully cuts out the tiny curved piece he is going to use next. It is an intricate piece, and his hand shakes a little, but the razor blade runs through on the black line, and he lifts the little piece free and puts it down on the table to apply a spot of glue to each end of it. Then carefully, with his right hand, he sets the piece in its place. "I let my nails grow long," he says, "I can use my fingernails for lots of things." With the long fingernail of his right forefinger he scrapes off a little drop of glue that is squeezed out of the joint and wipes it on a piece of paper.

"I'm worried about this hand," he says. "Of course, I guess I can get a job. I'm not worried about that so much. But I've got to get this hand into shape so that it will grab ahold of things." He turns the model plane over and then studies the pattern sheet for the next piece. He is silent for a long time. "My wife knows I was hurt," he says. "She doesn't know how bad. She knows I'm going to get well all right and come home, but—she must be thinking pretty hard. I got to get that hand working. She wouldn't like a cripple with a hand that wouldn't work."

His eyes are a little feverish. "Well, how would you like a cripple to come home? What would you think about that?"

"It will always be a little crooked," he says, "but I wouldn't mind that so much if it worked. I don't think she would mind so much if it worked. She has got a job in a plane factory out on the coast—doing a man's work. She says she is doing fine and I'm not to worry. Here. I'll show you a picture of her." He reaches in his bathrobe pocket. "Where is it?" he says. "The nurse always takes it off my stand and puts it in here." He puts his left hand in his pocket and brings out a little leather wallet. And suddenly he sees what he has done and the fingers relax and the wallet drops to the table. "God Almighty!" he says. "Did you see that?" He looks at the crooked hand still suspended in the air. "That's twice in two days," he says softly. "Twice in two days."

Ontario Liberal Party Challenged in August Election

Toronto, July 28 (AP).—Ontario, wealthiest and most populous province of Canada, will elect a new 90-member Legislature on August 4 in a dual challenge to the Liberal Party which has been in power since 1934.

Should the Liberals be defeated, the mandate would go either to the Progressive Conservatives, new designation for the Conservative Party, or to the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation, Socialist Party which has a minority following in the Parliament at Ottawa and a scattering membership in provincial legislatures.

The Progressive Conservatives are traditional opponents of the Liberals in a system that has seen these two parties competing for office in both dominion and provincial elections for 76 years.

The Cooperative Commonwealth Federation, which had its inception after the first World War, is headed by Ed Jolliffe, 34-year-old lawyer and Rhodes scholar and a worker for years in party and labor union circles.

Heading the Progressive Conservatives is Lieut. Col. George Drew, 49-year-old lawyer, a war veteran and son-in-law of Edward Johnson, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera in New York.

When Mitchell F. Hepburn resigned the premiership last October his reasons never were made clear—he passed the office along to Gordon Conant, his attorney general, who lost the leadership in April to Harry Nixon. Nixon called the election in disregard of a vote of the Legislature extending its life for a year, because of the war.

Former Premier Hepburn, who is running in this election, although not as a leader, became nationally known as head of the provincial government principally because of his opposition to the parent Liberal government at Ottawa and its leader, Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King.

The Woman Behind the Man Behind the Gun

WOMEN are contributing to Victory in countless ways which, while not as spectacular as the work of our men in the Army, Navy and Air Force, is every bit as essential.

Many Fuller Dealers are serving in the armed forces, and women have taken over their business of selling Fuller Brushes. In this new occupation they are serving the war effort on the home front. Because they are thoroughly familiar with housekeeping problems, they are well equipped to advise how to use Fuller Brushes to best advantage.

Fuller Brushes meet an essential war time need. They contribute to health, cleanliness, and sanitation. War workers need these time-and-labor saving housekeeping servants more than ever before.

To supply the Armed Forces is our first duty. To supply the requirements of our home customers is an obligation which we are also meeting.

Screen Acting at Its Best Goes on View Tomorrow

THOSE WHO ENJOY a catch in the throat and a vagrant tear to afford terminal facilities for an otherwise warmly vivacious love story—and this, no doubt, would embrace most of the feminine audience—will find something intensely to their liking when the Warner Brothers production of "The Constant Nymph" opens tomorrow on the screen at the Earle Theater.

JOAN FONTAINE

This, however, is less the dominant impression a scant hour after yesterday's preview than that in it audiences will be seeing one of the most imposing acting ensembles of recent months.

Superlative performances, of course, are invariably to be expected of such thoroughly schooled and experienced artists as Charles Boyer, Joan Fontaine, Charles Coburn and Dame May Whitty. It is the more an agreeable surprise to note that Alexis Smith, a comparative newcomer to roles of such importances as she portrays in this sterling subject, takes easy rank with them in poise, authority and all-around effectiveness.

While there is no present intention to review "The Constant Nymph" two days in advance of its proper time, it is no more than fair to all concerned to give warning that one of the finest performances she has ever brought to the screen may confidently be looked forward to in Miss Fontaine's assumption of the pivotal role of Tessa. If it were possible for anyone to "steal the picture" from such distinguished associates, Miss Fontaine is the one who would be charged with the theft.

That Academy "Oscar" evidently was not the fluke some people thought.

Our old friend, Oscar A. Doob, national director of advertising and publicity for the Loew theaters, is in there again. This able fellow-Hoosier has just been loaned by Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., to the Washington office of the Treasury Department, at the request of Secretary Morgenthau. His assignment is to take charge of advertising for the entire promotion of war bond sales in the Third War Loan drive, with the title of Assistant National Director of the War Finance Committee. This is one of the most important civilian posts given to a member of the film industry since the war began and may be construed as a tribute to the picture industry's wholehearted participation in the war effort. Congratulations all around.

Out of the Celluloids, Into the Night Clubs

Victor Borge, radio's unmelancholy Dane, who first achieved fame as the comic pianist on Bing Crosby's show and later added to it as head man of his own daily Blue Network program, has withdraw from the cast of RKO-Radio's film version of the Broadway musical, "Higher and Higher," to embark upon a more personal enterprise. Mr. Borge will devote the next few months to personal appearances in leading theaters and night clubs in the East.

His next stop will be at the Hotel Statler in this city, where he will begin an engagement on Thursday, August 5. Although signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and to have been loaned to RKO to appear with Frank Sinatra, Michele Morgan and The Hartmans in "Higher and Higher," Borge feels that his picture career, like Heaven, in the Ernst Lubitsch film "sneak" previewed at Loew's Columbia last night, can wait.

In case you have been wondering about the excellent performance given by Helena Kuo, with Loretta Young, Alan Ladd and William Bendix in "China," coming off the Earle screen tonight, Miss Kuo was technical adviser on matters pertaining to the Chinese women in the cast. Furthermore, Miss Kuo, born in China, is an author of books and magazine articles on the women of New China and a lecturer of note. The author-lecturer twice was in the midst of Japanese bombing raids in China and twice has been a visitor at the White House as guest of Mrs. Roosevelt.

Little Revives a Powerful Film

The title figure of "The Golem," French film currently being revived at the Little, is a seventeenth-century Frankenstein, a benevolent monster created by a rabbi of great learning. The story of the film, adapted from a legend that arose in medieval Prague, deals with the faith of denizens of the Prague ghetto that the Golem, returned to its inanimate state by the rabbi at his death, would come to life once more at the height of their suffering and liberate them from the corrupt and oppressive government which held them in subjection.

It's a story as exciting as it is significant.

Over and above its interest as a thriller, however, the film has an immediate significance not dimmed by the fact that it is an old picture made from an ancient story. The oppressors of the citizens of Prague were not obsessed men, motivated by a sincere though satanic ideology; their persecutions stemmed from personal corruption, the sophistry of a clergy which permitted and rationalized tyranny.

Harry Baur, distinguished French actor who is reported to have been executed by the Nazis for work in an underground, contributes a superb performance as the half-crazy, lonely old Rudolph II.

Hollywood, Calif., July 28.—Ever since Walter Brennan saw the late Will Rogers in "State Fair," he made up his mind that if the picture ever were done again, he wanted to play Will's part. Now plans are well under way for him to do it. Remember in "State Fair" there was a prize porker named Blue Boy? They're searching for another Blue Boy, but this is the payoff: He'll have to sing, 'cause the famous Dick Rogers is writing a song which goes from one grunt to another . . . Doris Duke Cromwell is backing Vincent Youmans' first picture, "The Life of Tschaikowsky" . . . Zorina is testing to play opposite Ronald Colman in "Kismet" . . . Billy Gaxton and Victor Moore have turned down Michael Todd's musical, "Mexican Hayride." You can look for the two to be teamed on a big radio show which will emanate from Hollywood. Don't be surprised if you find the comedy team in Metro's "Ziegfeld Follies."

Maybe they will when he attempts "Seasick Sailor" in "Around the World" . . . Columbia executives are arguing as to why the studio was going to do "The Life of Chopin?" Frank Capra will be shown to the people of Britain—because Winston Churchill requested that the prints be sent to England . . . One of Jimmy Byrnes' intimates was asked about Byrnes' reaction to the current boom to place him on the 1944 ticket. "The Justice," was the reply, "looks on it with benevolent disapproval" . . . Milo Perkins, now jobless, may become Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

JACK BENNY

Jack Dempsey is moving his children from their Westchester home to the penthouse at his newly acquired Great Northern Hotel . . . Although the cast of "This Is the Army" is being split up into two units—for England and for Africa—Irving Berlin will appear with both units . . . On August 2 Eleanor Roosevelt will lead a tribute to Europe's underground . . . A Daily Express correspondent in the Mediterranean missed the invasion of Sicily. He boarded a ship and was told, naturally, that its captain was sailing under sealed orders. A few hours out of port the sealed orders were revealed—the ship was going home to England.

George Jean Nathan can have the drama-critic's post at the Journal-American if he wants it. The hitch is his insistence on writing reviews 24 hours later, rather than meet a deadline . . . The War Activities Commission will offer to all theaters a two-reel condensed color-movie of Life in the Aleutians, made by Capt. John Houston, and concluding with a raid in Kiska . . . When Sergt. Marion Hargrove, author of "See Here, Private Hargrove," arrived in China, he met General Stilwell—who looked at the sergeant's stripes and sighed: "I don't see how you can have the gall to wear those, after the things you've said about 'em."

Pvt. George B. McCoy, "The McCoy" whose Man-In-the-Street interviews became an N. B. C. coast-to-coast feature, now is in Sicily, after a long stay in Africa. Private McCoy studied the Army's handbook on how to behave in Africa. "I get it," he told his commanding officer. "In Africa it's all right for a soldier to walk a mile for a Camel, but he musn't reach for a Fatima" . . . The Army series, "Know Your Allies," is almost completed. Lieut. Col. Anatol Litvak finished the one on Russia, and the one on China is almost done . . . The Jack Benny troupe will chart new regions for the USO. Not even a movie has been shown in those places.

Taxes Absorb 60% of Stores' Gross Profits

The National Retail Dry Goods Association said yesterday that while 1942 was a banner year for department and specialty store trade, taxes took 60 to 65 per cent of retail operating profits.

A survey of 277 department and apparel specialty stores, the association said, showed sales, gross margins and operating profits in 1942 were the highest on record.

The rise in sales, while attributed in part to greater consumer incomes, was credited also to a shift from such unavailable items as automobiles, tires and gasoline.

Two factors were noted in a number of departments as having a major effect on profits, an increase in "markups" or the gross profit, and a decrease in "markdowns" or reduction of prices for clearance. For most store divisions, too, stock shortages increased.

ICC Stays Order on Plea

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday stayed through July 31 its order of Tuesday which authorized issuance of $28,483,000 of bonds by the Pennsylvania, Ohio & Detroit Railroad, a subsidiary of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The stay, ordered by Commissioner Claude R. Porter, presumably will give the commission time to determine whether it should grant a petition by Otis & Co., Cleveland investment bankers, for a rehearing.

Cox Apologizes to Harris After Player Strike Threat

White Sox Slaughter Nats at Night, 12 to 7

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

One word apparently led to another until Bucky Harris was fired as manager of the Phillies by Clubowner Bill Cox, who must be some kind of a phoof if you ask us.

It was a very descriptive two-syllable word, in fact, that brought out into the open the impossible and ludicrous state of affairs that existed between this guy Cox and the men who were supposed to be running his ball team. It wasn't exactly a nice word, but it got the idea across to Cox.

POVICH

The word was uttered a couple of weeks ago when the St. Louis Cardinals were due in Philadelphia for a series with the Phillies. Earl Whitehill, the Phillies' coach, not Harris, was expressing himself. He was using the proverbially purple and unsubtle language of the ballplayers' dressing rooms.

Whitehill went on record when he noticed a sign posted on the bulletin board in the Phils' dressing quarters. It was a sophomoric attempt by the club owner to pep up the Phillies. It read: "The Cardinals are coming to town, and we know we can beat them. (Signed) William Cox."

Whitehill read the notice and then said what the other hard-bitten professional ballplayers were thinking about Cox's rah-rah tactics. "————————," said Whitehill loudly.

Unknown to Whitehill, Owner Cox was in the dressing room at the time and plainly overheard him. Whitehill's job was saved at that time by Bucky Harris, who interceded, declaring that Whitehill was a loyal character and a help to the team. Whitehill stayed, but his number was up. When Harris got the ax the other day, it was no surprise when Whitehill's head rolled, too.

The rift between Harris was a-building for a long time, incidentally. There had to be a limit to Harris' tolerance somewhere along the line. Cox, a greenpea in baseball, was fudging up the works generally with his unorthodox enthusiasms. He was spoiled by the tremendous success of the Phillies at the start of the season and the hefty gate receipts. He couldn't understand it when the team slumped and the crowds fell off.

All the while, Harris, a realist, didn't permit himself to think the Phillies were going far beyond fifth place. He tried to tell Cox that he didn't have enough good ball players, but Cox couldn't understand why the Phils shouldn't beat the Cardinals and the Dodgers and the Pirates and Reds and the other good clubs in the league.

Harris discovered that Cox was calling in players for inspirational pep talks and invaded the dressing room at will. Cox once wanted to deliver a lecture on the bench, but Harris talked him out of it. Cox wasn't doing the team or Harris any good by sitting in a box seat and hurling insults at the umpires, either. The man meant well, but it was no way to run a ball team.

Before the season started, Cox got grandiose ideas about his Phillies. He thought about calling them the "Commandos," a name that would have made the perennial last-place club even more ridiculous. He told Harris that he wanted Commando training for the players in the spring along with their hitting and fielding practice. Harris didn't like it.

Cox hired some kind of a track coach named Dr. Harold Anson Bruce who was supposed to improve the speed and stamina of the ballplayers. Harris had to put up with Dr. Bruce. But he didn't like the idea much, especially when the doctor would take four or five of Harris' regulars out to center field before a ball game and put them through some rigorous calisthenics on the same afternoon that Harris wanted them in the line-up, fresh and ready.

Harris is fired, but he won't lose financially. His one-year contract contained no 10-day clause. He will be paid up in full for the season, and there will have to be a settlement of some kind made on Harris' contract which calls also for a commission depending on the home attendance of the Phils for the season.

But it adds up to a fine shoving-around for Harris who made so many friends for the Phillies that they surpassed by July 4, of this season, the total attendance of last year. Any day now, the Phillies can equal the number of games they won throughout all of last season. Harris' early success pulled the club out of the red, quickly, and made Cox look like a smart fellow.

It was a shoddy sort of deal Harris got, anyway. He didn't know he was fired until newspapermen told him about it. That wasn't nice. Maybe it was Cox's idea of the direct approach.

We have one favorite guess as to where Harris will wind up—Brooklyn. He may replace Leo Durocher now or at the end of the season. Branch Rickey wanted Harris to manage the Dodgers when Durocher was apparently headed for the Army last spring. Harris turned down the job to take the management of the Phillies, thinking he would like to work for Cox. Was he surprised?

Phils Owner Apologizes To Harris

24 Players Sign Strike Petition Unless Bucky Is Retained by Cox

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 28.—William D. Cox, president of the Philadelphia Phillies baseball club, tonight apologized to Bucky Harris "because of an unfortunate incident relative to the release of a story of your leaving" the ball club, after 24 players presented Cox with a signed ultimatum that they would strike unless Cox reinstated Harris as manager and gave him a chance to resign.

The petition, signed by 24 players, was withdrawn after a clubhouse incident in which Harris told the players that Cox's statement "is good enough for me." Cox told Harris in front of the squad that the ouster "is not intended to reflect in any way on your ability as a baseball manager."

(In Philadelphia, meantime, a reliable source disclosed that this was the second time the players had backed Harris. This informant said that on July 20 in Pittsburgh Cox had notified Harris and Coach Earl Whitehill that they were through. When the players learned of it they are said to have told Cox they would refuse to take the field the next day unless he reconsidered. Cox then smoothed the matter over with Harris and Whitehill and arranged to send Harris on a scouting trip, leaving Whitehill in temporary charge. Harris regarded the matter as a closed incident, this source said, and was genuinely shocked upon hearing of Fitzsimmons' appointment as his successor.)

The petition asserted the players' belief that Cox should have taken up personally with Harris any differences about the management of the club and should have given Harris a chance to resign. "We feel that because of his background and experience . . . he is entitled to just that decency."

Harris and the new Phillie manager, Fred Fitzsimmons, talked outside the clubhouse while the players rebelled against Cox.

Then Cox and his attorney, Charles Grimes, conferred outside with Harris, after which followed the clubhouse apology by Cox.

Harris said "I feel that they (the players) have vindicated any charges against me as a baseball manager. Their sentiments are good enough for me. The stand they have taken in my behalf flatters me no little."

He told the players to give their best for Fitzsimmons and the clubhouse rebellion was over.

The players had declared that "no matter whom Mr. Cox should choose to manage us, we should all give him our wholehearted support to win" if Harris were given a chance to quit.

Nats' Johnny Sullivan Takes Off for a $50 War Bond

$24,000 Realized For War Benefit Fund; Outfielder Curtright Beaned

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nats played for charity last night and, to put it charitably, they did not perform with much excellence. They were plastered—by the White Sox, we hasten to add. They took a 12-to-7 lacing, and this morning you'll find 'em in the second division, in fifth place.

A gathering of 20,500 fans who contributed an estimated sum of $24,000 to associated war charities in the form of gate receipts, watched an hour of pageantry before the game and then saw the Nats in 2½ hours of futility.

The White Sox threatened at one time to make at least one hit for every fan in the park, but ended up with only 21 hits against the Washington pitching. Rae Scarborough gave up 12 hits in the first seven innings, but if you think that was a sour performance, you should have seen Alex Carrasquel in the last two innings. He escaped with his life, somehow.

Guy Curtright Beaned

Carrasquel was no help to anybody, not even the White Sox. He beaned Outfielder Guy Curtright with a pitch and sent him to Georgetown University Hospital. Curtright was carried off the field on a stretcher in the eighth inning after being struck on the base of the skull by a curve ball, but was believed not seriously hurt.

During the course of the evening, George Case lost his base stealing lead. He was tied for it by Wally Moses, of the White Sox, who stole his twenty-sixth base of

Harder Halts Yankees for Indians, 6-2

New York, July 28 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians whipped the New York Yankees, 6 to 2, in the first half of a Red Cross benefit doubleheader today, but the two teams together couldn't beat the Woodbusters of the North Carolina Navy Pre-Flight School in the exhibition nightcap. The embryo fliers pounded out a 11 to 5 victory.

A crowd of 27,281, lured in part by the appearance of Babe Ruth as manager of the "Yanklands," as the hodge-podge major league team was called, paid an estimated $35,000 to see the show.

Harder Throttled Yanks

The Yankees were pretty well throttled by the five-hit pitching of the veteran Mel Harder in the regular league game, while the Indians found little mystery in the slants of Spurgeon Chandler. Chandler was nicked for all the Tribes' runs and eight of their 10 hits in the four innings he worked before being relieved by Atley Donald.

The Indians plowed into Chandler for four runs in the first inning and picked up two more in the fourth on Lou Boudreau's home run into the left field stands with Ray Mack on base.

Browns Rout Macks, 5 to 1

Philadelphia, July 28 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns scored five runs tonight on only six hits to defeat the Philadelphia Athletics, 5 to 1, in a Red Cross War Relief game before 9200 in Shibe Park. Chet Laabs and George McQuinn homered for the Browns, each with the bases empty.

Orrie Arntzen, who started on the mound for the Athletics, had a no-hit game for five and two-thirds innings, until Laabs parked one of his offerings in the left field stands. That tied the score at 1-1.

In the seventh three singles and an infield out put the Browns in front 3-1, and in the ninth McQuinn opened with his homer and the Browns added another run on a walk to Chartak, a sacrifice and Frank Hayes' double.

Chicago Cubs Beat Dodgers Twice, 8-7, 4-2

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 28.—The climbing Chicago Cubs clouted the Brooklyn Dodgers in both ends of a doubleheader today and dumped the Bums into third place in the National League, at least temporarily.

The Cubs outlasted half a dozen elbowers in the first game to take an 8-to-7 verdict when Stu Martin

Case Proves Speed Reputation By Beating Tucker in Sprint

Nats' Base Stealer Outruns Fielders In Climax of Colorful Benefit Pageant

George Case upheld his reputation as the American League's leading speedster when he overhauled Thurmon Tucker White Sox outfielder, in the final yards of a 60-yard special sprint last night at Griff Stadium.

Case has barely a yard margin over the fleet Chicagoan at the finish of the race, which climaxed a program of pageantry preliminary to the ball game.

Twenty thousand fans saw Tucker take a scant lead in the feature race which brought together outfielders of the two clubs. Case caught the Chicagoan 15 yards from the tape and barely pulled away. Guy Curtright of the White Sox was a close third. The race was run in 6.5 seconds, fast time on the turf in baseball shoes.

Joe Haynes, Chicago pitcher, won the race for batterymen, beating out teammate, Bill Dietrich, by a 3-foot margin. Early Wynn of the Nationals was third in that sprint.

Johnny Sullivan led the Nats to a clean sweep in the race for infielders. Sullivan sprinted the 60 yards in 6.6, leading all the way to beat out George Myatt and Mickey Vernon in a blanket finish. Luke Appling of the White Sox was fourth.

The 94-piece Army Air Force Band and the newly-organized Washington Police Band led an impressive parade of American Legionnaires on the field at the start of the hour long program.

On display too was the World's largest American flag, which brought gasps of admiration from the throng. The flag 420 feet long, was brought from San Francisco for the occasion.

Hundreds of Legionnaires swung through maneuvers to the nostalgic tunes of World War songs "Over There" and "Pack Up Your Troubles."

The Touchdown Club joined the Legion and Clark Griffith in sponsoring the program, with all receipts turned over to war charities. Arch McDonald was master of ceremonies.

Extra Dates for Maryland Tracks Seen by Commission

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, July 28.—A spokesman for the Maryland Racing Commission said today that there was a strong possibility the Commission would allow an extra 50 days of racing at the State's major tracks this fall if the ban on pleasure driving were rescinded.

Permission already has been granted for a 30-day meeting at Pimlico, with the stipulation that it be managed jointly by Pimlico and the other major ovals of the State—Laurel Havre de Grace and Bowie. The meeting has been scheduled for October 9 to November 13.

The spokesman said he thought it would be the logical thing for Laurel, which is close to railroad and bus lines, to apply for the 50 days and share them with the other tracks.

He added that, if the meeting were held, it would have to be completed before the end of the year.

Meanwhile, the commission had under consideration applications from the Marlboro and Cumberland half-mile tracks for September racing dates. The spokesman said the applications would not be acted on before August 10.

Under Maryland law, 100 days of major racing is allowed in the State each year and a total of 50 days of minor track racing is permissible.

Phils Halt Cards, End Streak, 6 to 4

St. Louis, July 28 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies, boiling over the curtness of President Bill Cox's dismissal of Bucky Harris as manager, tore into the St. Louis Cardinals tonight with a four-run first inning and coasted home, winning 6 to 4. The loss, snapping the Cards' winning streak at 11 consecutive triumphs, was inflicted before 17,883 fans at a war benefit game.

President to Reconsider College Football for Army

President Roosevelt has opened the way for possible reconsideration of an Army order preventing soldier trainees from participating in intercollegiate athletics, aides of Representative Weiss (Democrat) of Pennsylvania told the Associated Press yesterday.

The Chief Executive, in a letter to Weiss, thanked him for a telegram calling the ruling to his attention and said he would take it up with Secretary of War Stimson.

Weiss, chairman of an informal House committee which has been urging that trainees be allowed to play, recently said that only the Army could save college football next autumn.

Many major colleges have abandoned football for the duration because "all of the better players have gone into service," Weiss said, adding that other schools are waiting for the War Department's decision.

Weiss' committee has conferred with high-ranking Army officers and Undersecretary of War Patterson, with no definite action being taken as yet. Weiss said he "felt their attitude was unfavorable because none of them had been closely associated with athletics," but the President's letter "revives hope," his aides said.

Detroit Jockeys Threaten to Strike in Support of Adams

Riders Say Suspension Was Unfair

Racing Official Persuades Boys To Ride, Pending Further Discussion

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 28.—Jockeys at the Detroit Fair Grounds talked strike today over the suspension of Johnny Adams, the Nation's leading rider, but a settlement seemed on the way tonight.

The jockeys met with State Racing Commissioner William J. Dowling during the afternoon and told him that they considered Adams' 25-day suspension for not filling an engagement here last Saturday as "Unfair."

Discussions Pending

John Swisher, general manager of the Jockeys' Guild, met with Dowling before racing opened today and told him 15 jockeys were planning to strike today. Dowling persuaded them to ride today, pending further discussions.

Later Dowling told the jockeys that "no injustice would be done" and indicated that Adams' suspension would be eased.

Rode in Arlington Classic

Adams was suspended Saturday after he went to Chicago to ride Charles T. Fisher's Amber Light in the Arlington Classic. He also was scheduled to ride Earl H. Beezley's Grasshopper II at the Fair Grounds. Beezley had a written agreement with Adams for the second call in Johnny's services here. Earl Wyat has first call.

The Jockeys Guild contended that Adams had a verbal understanding with Beezley that he would be permitted to ride in the Chicago race.

Redskins Work on New Plays, Formation at Training Camp

Bergman Preparing Squad for Rough Work; Wilbur Moore Being Groomed for New Role

San Diego, Calif., July 28.—The Washington Redskins romped through their sixth practice workout here this afternoon in preparation for the Shrine game on August 15, but more important, the Chicago All-Star game in the Windy City on August 25.

Coach Bergman has the squad loosened up and the kinks ironed out and is now ready to get down to the serious business at hand. He is losing no time getting the offense started, one that will be completely new to many of the veteran players. He will use much of the single and double wing formations used by Flaherty last year, but he is installing a version of the "T" off of which he intends to run many spinners and reverse plays.

Wilbur Moore, for several years one of the outstanding wing backs, will be used more to advantage in this formation, Bergman believes, primarily because of his great adeptness at running plays to the left. Moore will probably be used quite extensively as a ball carrier this year, along with Bob Seymour.

Wee Willie Wilkin, Don Nolander, Minnesota Center, and Raymond Ruett, guard from V. M. I., have arrived in camp and the squad is beginning to take a definite form.

Facing Turk Edwards is the tremendous problem of finding sufficient man power to fill the tackle spots left vacant by the loss of Fred Davis, Bill Young and Ed Beinor. Joe Pasqua, acquired from Cleveland, will in all probability get the right tackle spot, with Wilkin at left. Dick Farman and Clyde Shugart, both tackles in college, may be moved from guard to tackle this year because of their size and speed.

Frank Akins, Washington State halfback, has proven to be the most promising rookie in camp to date.

Petro to Meet Cockfield on Turner's Card

Danny Petro, Washington's plucky and hard hitting young featherweight, last night was awarded a spot on Promoter Joe Turner's boxing show at Griffith Stadium Monday night, August 9.

Petro, who had resented having former world's featherweight champion Chalky Wright selected over him as an opponent for Angel Aviles in the 10 round main event, had been paired 10 rounds with Johnny Cockfield, one of New York's better 126 pounders.

Cockfield has gone the distance with Willie Pep and has boxed draws with Pedro Hernandez, Terry Young and Tony Costa.

Petro gave a game account of himself his last time out when he was knocked out by former world's champion Jackie Wilson in the tenth and last round of their bout.

Ahearn Seeks Gus Dorazio, Marshall Bout

Promoter Goldie Ahearn last night was dickering for a 10-round boxing feature which would involve Herbert Marshall, hard-hitting New York Negro heavyweight, and "Dynamite Gus" Dorazio, Philadelphia's famous spoiler, at Griffith Stadium, Monday, August 23.

Marshall scored a smash hit here on the Bob Montgomery—Frankie Wills card recently when he required less than a round in which to put away Johnny Napolitano.

Marshall defeated Dorazio in a previous bout in Philadelphia—Gus' home town—and repeated efforts have been made to rematch them since.

In his last appearance locally, Dorazio lost a disputed decision to Joe Baksi, but reversed the result on unanimous decision in a return meeting in Philadelphia shortly afterward.

Lions Included In Hockey Plans

New Haven, Conn., July 28 (AP). President Maurice Podoloff announced today that the American Hockey League would operate this year with at least six clubs and possibly seven.

Back from a league meeting held in Atlantic City, N. J., Podoloff said the 1943 campaign would get under way on November 3 with Buffalo, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Pittsburgh, Providence and Washington as starters.

Whether Hershey (Pa.), a league member last year, will operate this year, Podoloff said, will depend on the gasoline rationing situation.

Red Sox Win Double-Header From Tigers

By International News Service

Boston, July 28.—The Red Sox staged a four-run rally in the eighth inning to beat the Detroit Tigers, 6 to 4, in the second games of a war relief double-header today, after grabbing off the first game, 4 to 1, back of the five-hit pitching of "Lefty" Judd.

Hal White, with a two-run lead, started off the eighth by issuing two walks. He was then relieved by Johnny Gorsica, who gave up a single to Jim Tabor, a double to Bobby Doerr and a single to Pete Fox.

Heber (Dick) Newsome, pitching the first eight innings on the home hill, gained credit for his second win of the year.

The Hose made only six hits off Virgil Trucks and Tommy Bridges in the opener, but four of them, including a George Metkovitch home run, counted for runs.

A crowd of 18,032 contributed an estimated $20,000 to the War Relief fund.

Sharkey Scores Over Lever, But Referee Is Real Loser

Rough Richard Butts Bouque Out of Ring; Thunderbird Pins Stein; Maurice, Leone Tie

Blustery Babe Sharkey scored a hair-raising victory over Dick Lever after 22 minutes of the feature wrestling match before 600 fans at Turner's Arena last night, but Referee Tiny Bouque stole the show when he took an unscheduled header out of the ring.

The arbiter was butted out of the ring by Lever, just after Richard had administered the same treatment to Sharkey. The incident was definitely not in the script, and the 350-pound Bouque, more surprised than anyone, made a three-pointer—both elbows and his head. Although he clambered in to finish the match, the house doctor said there was a possibility he had fractured his left arm.

Sharkey Pinned, But . . . .

While the block-and-tackle gang was trying to hoist the referee back to battle, Lever pinned Sharkey long enough to have won several matches. However, with no official talisman present, his work went for naught, and the big Babe rallied to score with the winning headlock.

The scuffle was customarily rough, with Lever strangely in the role of hero. This caused no compliment, since the fans probably would choose even Mussolini to win over the truculent Texan.

Chief Thunderbird won over Abe Stein with body slams and a press in 14 minutes, after beating out "Hail to the Redskins" on Stein's slightly-bald skull. The New Yorker was no match for the Indian, latching on with his pet hold almost at will.

La Chappelle, Leone Draw

Maurice La Chappelle and Michele Leone worked to a spectacular half-hour draw. Again it was the arbiter who was featured, with both men ripping his shirt to shreds and pushing him around scandalously. Leone used a portion of the shirt to garrote the Frenchman who returned the compliment with a towel.

The Mask (Hans Kampfer, to the older patrons) defeated Abe Yourist with a body press in 14. Honest Abe claimed he was robbed and told the fans, via the P. A., that he wanted to meet the hooded the season in the very first inning.

White Sox Win; Drop Nats in 2d Division

And so now the Nats have lost eight of their last nine starts. They're only a game and a half ahead of the seventh place Red Sox, in fact.

The White Sox didn't dally long with Scarborough. They took a 2-0 lead in the first inning after Moses walked and stole second. Tucker and Appling also piled hits into the inning. In the third they made it 3-1 after Kuhel doubled.

Buck Ross didn't give up a run to the Nats until the sixth. By that time the Sox were leading 4-0, with the help of Sullivan's fumble, one of the Nats' four errors of the night. Some solid hitting got the Nats two runs in the sixth, but the third out was Spence's ill-fated attempt to score from second on Webb's fumble.

Scarborough was lucky the Sox didn't score a half dozen more runs.

Three times Ellis Clary saved him with leaping one-hand catches of line drives. The Nats muffed a chance to get back in the ball game in the seventh when Spence grounded out with the bases full after Joe Haynes, Ross' successor had forced over a run.

In the eighth and ninth they gave it to Carrasquel good. They got three runs in each inning, with five hits in the eighth and four in the ninth. They took a 12-4 lead into the ninth. Carrasquel had really messed it up for the Nats. He gave one run away on a balk with the bases full.

Washington rocked Haynes for four hits and three runs in the ninth with the help of Jake Early's triple off the right field wall. But with the Nats needing only five runs to tie, Early was left to perish on third base when Sullivan grounded out, dern it.

Dodgers Beaten Twice by Cubs

singled home the winning run in the eleventh. Young Hank Wise turned in a steady seven-hitter for a 4-to-2 win in the nightcap, his fifth victory in a row.

The Dodgers' drop into third place hinges on the outcome of the Pittsburgh Pirates' night game with the Boston Braves. If the Bucs win, the Brooklyns stay there; a loss for Pittsburgh puts the Dodgers back in second place.

Brooklyn not only lost both games today, but also the services of Lefty Fritz Ostermueller, who fractured his left ankle in the first game. The 35-year-old southpaw, who came to Brooklyn from the St. Louis Browns in the Bobo Newsom deal, suffered the injury sliding into third base in the seventh inning.

Alsab Ends Rest, Will Race at Washington Park

Chicago, July 28 (AP).—Mrs. Al Sabath's Alsab is scheduled to make his 1943 debut at Washington Park tomorrow. The 4-year-old Alsab has been idle since winning the Victory Handicap at Belmont Park last November 11.

Alsab runs in a 6-furlong race called the Bold Venture Purse. It's an overnight affair with a $1800 purse.

Dutch Raider, a home-bred juvenile owned by Kenneth Murchison of Dallas, Tex., ran to a surprice victory in the $5000 added Hyde Park Stakes today.

Scoring his first victory of the meeting in four starts, Dutch Raider beat another outsider, James Emery's High Harp, by a neck in the 5½-furlong dash. A. C. Ernest's 6-5 shot, Alorter, was third, three quarters of a length behind High Harp.

Dutch Raider, ridden by Pliney Johnson, paid $34.60, $12.80 and $6.40. High Harp's prices were $16.20 and $5.60. Alorter paid $2.80. The time was 1:06 2/5. The winner earned $4525.

Yanks and Ruth's Team Defeated

Ruth, as usual, added his artistic touch to the exhibition contest. Nobody had expected the big guy to do anything but sit on the bench or mince back and forth in the coaching box.

Came the sixth inning and who should roll up to the plate but the ample form of the Bambino, more "kewpie-ish" than ever. He had elected himself to pinch hit for Pitcher Ray Poat. He drew a walk after missing the ball once in typical Ruthian style and sending a high foul into the stands back of third.

He even decided to run for himself but after loping down to second on a single changed his mind and hurriedly beckoned for help.

The game itself, after a tight start, developed into a comedy of errors and batting-practice hitting, with the Cloudbusters ramming home seven runs in the seventh inning. Johnny Sain, former Boston Brave, pitched all the way for the Flying Sailors.

Manhattan Joins List of Colleges Dropping Football

New York, July 28 (AP).—Manhattan College joined the long list of schools which have dropped football today when Director of Athletics Herb Kopf announced the sport had been discontinued until conditions warrant its resumption.

Kopf said the use of the college by trainees of the Army specialized training program and the reduction of the civilian student enrollment made it impossible to field a team.

With Manhattan dropping out of competition, Columbia is the only major school in the metropolitan area which will play this fall.

Western Net Tourney Going Into Quarterfinals

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 28 (AP). Players with the ratings face their sternest tests tomorrow as singles competition in the Western Junior and Boys Tennis Tournament heads into the quarterfinals.

In the junior division five of the six seeded players still remain. One third-round singles match was played in this division today, John Shea of Los Angeles defeating Bernard Bartzen of San Angelo, Tex., 6—4, 8—6. Jack Tuero of New Orleans, seeded No. 1, will meet Shea in one of Thursday's better matches.

Three of the five seeded entries in the boys division are still in contention. Herbert Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., seeded No. 1, next faces Buddy Behrens of Orlando, Fla.

FWA Acts to Meet Servicemen's Needs at Union Station

The Federal Works Agency is expected to approve the appropriation of a large but yet undetermined amount of money for the construction at Union Station of restaurants, sleeping quarters and washrooms for servicemen and women, it was learned last night.

Architects are now engaged in drawing plans. Upon their completion they will be placed before William D. Rowe, administrative office for FWA for his approval. The agency may authorize construction by private contract under the Lanham Act, it was said.

The program was initiated at the request of the War Hospitality Committee of which Floyd D. Akers is chairman, and the request was based on a recent survey to determine needs of servicemen and women due to wartime congestion.

The survey disclosed servicemen traveling through the city need sleeping quarters and restaurants of their own while waiting for trains and transfer connections. It showed immediate need, Akers stated.

E. B. McLean, Jr., Reported Engaged

New York, July 28 (AP).—The New York Daily News said today that Edward Beale (Ned) McLean, jr., and Miss Gloria Hatrick of Larchmont, N. Y., will be married soon in Colorado Springs, Colo.

McLean and his first wife, the former Ann Meem, were divorced in Reno yesterday. They were married May 25, 1938. He is a son of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean of Washington, owner of the famed Hope diamond.

Gloria is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Hatrick of Larchmont, who are at Colorado Springs with her. They declined to comment.

D. C. Taxis Win Right to Transport Fares From Maryland

Taxicabs operating between the District and points in the State of Maryland will be allowed to accept passengers on return trips, effective today, for a three-month trial period, Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland announced yesterday.

Approval of the plan was given by the Governor at a conference attended by officials of the Washington, Maryland, Montgomery County and Prince Georges County police departments, as well as representatives of the Washington Regional Defense Transportation Board and the Office of Defense Transportation.

Previously taxicabs from the District, after discharging a passenger in Maryland, were not permitted to pick up a passenger before crossing the District line. It was pointed out that fullest utilization of taxicab service was not being realized and that numerous persons were being deprived of transportation even though taxicabs were available for the return trip.

Under the agreement approved by Governor O'Conor, District taxicabs will not be permitted to cruise in Maryland or park and wait for passengers they have driven there. After the delivery of passengers to Maryland, however, they will be permitted to accept District-bound passengers.

'42 Christmas Bonus Ordered Paid by WLB

Detroit, July 28 (AP).—The Regional War Labord Board today directed the 1900 Corporation of St. Joseph, Mich., to pay its 700 employes a Christmas bonus for the year 1942, on the ground that the bonus which it began paying in 1935 had become a part of the corporation's wage structure.

The board stipulated that the bonus would have to be paid even if the company operated at a loss during the year. The bonus must not exceed the amount paid for the year 1938, the board said.

Berlin Reports Rommel Is Now in Greece

London (Thursday), July 29 (AP). The German radio said today that the "secret surrounding Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's whereabouts has been ended" through the publication in Berlin morning papers of pictures showing the former North African commander arriving in Salonika, Greece.

Greece is the gateway to the German-held Balkans, largely garrisoned by Italian troops, and an Allied invasion through Salonika in the last war led to the defeat of Germany.

Previous reports had said Rommel was in France or Greece, and one recent rumor said he had been shot down while flying to Sicily after the Allied invasion there.

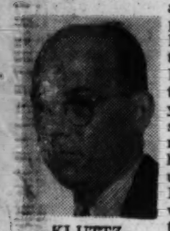
The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Agencies Face Calling On Annual Leave Issue

Federal agencies that have ignored the White House order to liberalize annual leave will be called on the carpet. They'll be asked for a report on what has been done to loosen up leave restrictions. A check yesterday showed that most agencies hadn't followed up the White House order with instructions to their own employes.



KLUTTZ

To repeat, the White House instructions apply to all Federal agencies. None has been exempted. The order was intended to give the agencies plenty of leeway in granting leave, and it was the plan of some of its sponsors that employes be allowed to take a few hours off every two or three weeks. But most of the employes haven't heard about it from their own supervisors.

J. Kenneth Galbraith, the former deputy director of the Office of Price Administration, may take a job with Lend-Lease. . . . Ernie Moore is slated to replace Henry Jarrett as chief of the press section at Agriculture. Jarrett is being drafted. . . . Decentralization of Federal agencies here appears to be over. Amos Hewitt, the able chief of Public Buildings' decentralization division, has resigned to return to his real estate business. He managed the transfer of more than a score of bureaus and thousands of employes from Washington. . . . Sidney Weinberg, WPB official, closed his office yesterday, but he'll be back on the job when he regains his health. . . . The WPB press section has had to lop off 30 employes. Budget troubles.

WPB Boss Donald Nelson and Manpower Boss Paul McNutt met yesterday on the problem of keeping people in their jobs. The job freeze isn't working, the turnover in war factories is enormous and production is down. It's a good bet that the two czars considered seriously some form of national service legislation . . . Frank Buckley, attorney, is chairman of the local American Legion committee that's investigating the discharges of veterans from the Federal service. Gail Judd, Earl Sawyer and Howard Fiske are other members. The committee will not protect inefficient veterans and it'll look into both sides of the case. It's primarily interested in cases where agencies have evaded the veterans' preference law. To date, it has had the full cooperation of the Civil Service Commission.

Back to Farm-Editing

Jim Russell, the Midwest farm editor who was a top assistant to Chester Davis when he was food czar, is going back to farm editing . . . The Smith Committee report demands that the OPA rent force be skeletonized. It said that it doesn't need as many employes as it formerly had. Well, that puts the rent division right on the beam. If the Smith Committee had inquired a bit further it would have discovered that the rent division had a peak of 6334 employes last fall. On July 1 it had 3668 and within a few months the staff will be cut down to 2831. The statement that the division could fire 5000 employes, of course, is ridiculous. It would have to get them first. Ivan Carson, the rent chief, brought about the reducation in force.

Our story yesterday about the Government Girl who got a $100 raise and it cost her $101 has been topped by another Givernment Girl. The second Government Girl got a $60 administrative promotion and it'll cost her $99. I don't blame her for squawking. So would I. She made $1920 and she paid a withholding tax of $12.80. Her salary was raised to $1980 and now she's having $16.20 withheld from her twice-a-month paycheck. That's an increase of $8 a month and $96 for the year. The retirement levy on the $60 is $3, making a total of $99. Both Government Girls hope they'll get some of the money back when Uncle Sam balances their tax accounts next March. However, they shouldn't count on that, for they'll probably have more to pay.

Office of Civilian Defense is awarding civilians for volunteer work. More than 440,000 awards have been made for service from 500 to 5000 hours of work. Service bars are being given. The Provost Marshal's Office in the War Department several days ago gave 57 of its civilians meritorious conduct awards which are based on efficiency ratings and attendance records. Meantime, the President's committee which was set up seven months ago to recognize civilians for outstanding war work continues to sit.

The Ramspeck Committee is investigating the ages and backgrounds of all employes in personnel work making $2600 and over. It's presumed that the committee is trying to get information to back up Representative Ramspeck's "callow collegian" charge but it may all turn out to be blessing for personnel offices. Ramspeck and other committee memoers believe better qualified people should operate personnel office. I agree. The committee realizes that inexperienced and young people have personnel jobs because the Government doesn't pay enough to attract better talent. So, the committee is very likely to back a plan to raise the grades of personnel people so as to get better employes.

City Wants Fire Truck Sirens Back

Mason Appeals to Army Following Crash That Killed One, Injured Six

District Commissioners petitioned the Army yesterday for immediate modification of the order which restricts the use of sirens to air raid alarms. The request followed Tuesday's collision between a hook-and-ladder fire truck and a large truck and trailer which resulted in the death of one fireman and the injury of six other persons.

Investigators said unofficially the fatal accident would not have occurred had the fire truck been equipped with a siren. The warning device was removed from all fire, police and ambulance equipment last February 27 as a result of an order issued by Lieut. Gen. Hugh L. Drum, chief of the Eastern Defense Command.

Fireman Lemuel L. Owens, 47, of Bradbury Heights, Md., was killed when the 65-foot fire apparatus, responding to a fire alarm, collided with a commercial truck at Sixth and E Streets Northwest.

Commissioner Guy Mason announced he had written Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis, commanding officer of the Washington Military District, requesting the no-siren order, as regards fire equipment, be immediately revoked. Police and ambulance equipment were not included in the request.

The original orders were issued by Army officials in the belief that sirens on public vehicles would be confused with air-raid sirens.

At a meeting between General Lewis, the Commisisoners and representatives of surrounding counties held here last June the question of revoking the restriction on fire apparatus was brought up. At that time General Lewis allowed some fire houses in the counties to continue the use of the sirens on the ground they were necessary to call volunteer firemen.

In a telephone conversation yesterday between Lewis and Commisisoner Mason, Lewis pointed out that he had not considered that a formal request for rescinding of the order in the District had been made and so had done nothing about it. General Lewis will have to transmit the Commisioners' request to General Drum before a final decision can be made in the case.

Up to late yesterday a formal report of the accident had not been transmitted to the Commissioners.

Two of the firemen and Kirkland Lites, 36, Negro, of 2149 N Street Northwest, were regarded last night as still seriously though not critically injured. The firemen were Sergt. Aubrey Mattingly, 32, of 4435 Thirteenth Street Northeast, and Millard F. Handy, 46, of Decatur Heights, Md., the tillerman on the ladder truck.

The others were Pvts. Donald A. Swope, 32, of 423 Eighteenth Street Northwest; James A. Bladen, 30, of Arlington, Va., and George E. Hild, 30, of Hyattsville, Md. They were reported in good condition.

Two Virginians Added to Naval Casualty List

Two Virginia men were among 22 additional casualties to United States naval forces reported yesterday by the Navy Department, which listed 8 dead, 12 wounded and 2 missing. In addition, 25 men previously reported prisoners were listed as dead, as were 3 men previously reported missing.

Ensign John Allen Helms of Norfolk was listed as dead, while Preston Lee Westmoreland of Dewitt was reported wounded.

This brings to 27,434 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported to next of kin since December 7, 1941. The grand total includes 8718 dead, 4790 wounded, 10,152 missing and 3774 prisoners of war.

Italians Want Lend-Lease Aid, Washington Sculptor Asserts

Pietro de Franceschi with "Bacchus"

By Bert Kemmerer

Post Staff Writer

Pietro de Franceschi, whose acquaintance list of Washington's great is impressive, rubbed his fresh-shaven chin reflectively. And for once he was not talking of sculpture, of statuary and stone fountains:

"I think they (the Italians) will be out of it this week," he said yesterday.

"They have everything to gain and nothing more to lose. They are anxious to get out of the war . . . I know. They want to get in on this lend-lease business, too."

But Pete, as he prefers to be called, has spent a lifetime with artists and those who love art. He forewent further speculation of Italy's fate. He smiled tenderly at the marble bust of Catherine de Medici and winked at the leering Bacchus.

Bacchus Dominates

He turned to Bacchus which dominates all the intersection of Twenty-fifth and K Streets Northwest, notwithstanding towering apartments nearby and the eaves of St. Stephen's Catholic Church in the background.

Pete is partial to Bacchus and you would wonder why. The elements haven't been the least partial. Winter blasts have scaled the silver veneer in great splotches, spring rains have left their mark. The sun too has blistered the massive statue. But it has stood for 10 years now dwarfing all else about it. It has grown on Pete.

Behind the 11-foot classical playboy is a beautiful marble copy of "Mother Love," the work of some long-forgotten Frenchman and near it another one equally attractive called "Vanity." Both were brought to America long ago from France.

Pete, 38, is the oldest of three brothers—but he is the one who stayed with the modest business established in 1904 by Luigi, the father who came to America from Odina, near the outskirts of Venice, Italy.

Noted Wood Carver

For three years now when a job calls for an artist and consultant, Pete has called on his good friend and associate, Francis Zucchet, whose studio is at 1611 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

As a sculptor, Zucchet is well known and he is among the outstanding wood carvers of the world. He is an instructor in the art department of Catholic University. Thus when Pete's clients want some particular involved task accomplished, Zucchet is called in.

De Franceschi has some pretty impressive customers, most of whom are his personal friends.

Pete grew up in Washington and many of his clients knew his father before him. Among them have been Senator Hiram Johnson, the late Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, Justice James C. McReynolds, Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury and a host of others.

Variegated Sculptures

Inside the building, where he works during inclement weather, are literally hundreds of statues, statuettes, masks, gargoyles and novelties.

Here on one shelf alone may be found models of Cleopatra, Lincoln, Washington, Dante, Venus de Milo, Napoleon, Jefferson, a knight in armor and a French mademoiselle, Franklin, gnomes, dwarfs, frogs, squirrels, lions, bears, cranes. A statue of St. Francis sorrowfully gazes at a cherub, and on the wall opposite is a relief of the Lord's Supper.

Monks jostle trolls and grotesque marine figures stare with bulging eyes. And there is dust everywhere. Pietro didn't apologize. He said "You got to expect that in a place like this."

2 More Meat-Price Complaints Linked With Black Market Here

That the black market in meats has not been completely eliminated here was indicated yesterday when Assistant U. S. Attorney Ray L. Jenkins disclosed that two complaints charging ceiling violations were filed this week at his office.

Jenkins said these complaints were relayed to the local office of the OPA, and warrants may be sworn out in the near future, should the complaints be valid.

In announcing the new drive against meat dealers selling at above ceiling prices, Jenkins requested public assistance, stating this the only way the black market can be stamped out. He asked all persons overcharged communicate with his office or with the local OPA immediately.

In bonafide cases, he said, warrants will be sworn out against offenders, who when brought into court face maximum sentences of a year in jail and a $5000 fine upon conviction.

Cubans Must Register

The Cuban Consul General, Jose A. Sera, has requested all Cuban nationals between the ages of 35 and 50 to register at the Cuban consulates in accordance with the Cuban law of emergency military service, it was announced yesterday. Dr. Aurelio Fernandez Concheso, Cuban Ambassador, was reported as the first registrant in Washington.

Inquiry Is Ordered

Mrs. Edna E. Gray, 61, Negro, charged with performing an abortion on a 26-year-old housewife, is scheduled to be tried on that charge this morning in District Court.

Late yesterday, however, her attorney made representation to Justice James W. Morris that Mrs. Gray is ill.

The justice ordered Assistant U. S. Attorney Bernard Margolius to chose a doctor, that Mrs. Gray do the same and that a third physician should be picked by the other two. They are to report their findings to the court in the morning, and if Mrs. Gray is determined to be well, she is to face trial immediately.

City Counsel Nominations Are Sought

Bar Association Head Appeals to Members to Suggest Candidates for Post

District Bar Association members yesterday were asked by their president, Milton King, to forward, within five days, their nominations for people's counsel to the Bar Association committee on judicial nominations, headed by Walter Bastian.

This committee is composed of past presidents of the association. From the list of nominations submitted the committee will select three names to be submitted to President Roosevelt for his consideration in making a selection.

Bar Association members also were asked to recommend a man to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Jo V. Morgan, former member of the Board of Tax Appeals of the District.

Bastian was particularly anxious that the members promptly consider the qualifications needed for the people's counsel position, which Congress restored to the appropriations bill in June, and suggest attorneys who would best fill it.

"The last judicial position that was open was filled by the President before the Bar Association ever got around to submitting possible names for him to consider," Bastian said.

Although the President said Tuesday that he had requested an opinion of the Attorney General on the usefulness of the people's counsel, local feeling was that Congress had expressly indorsed its usefulness in realloting funds.

14,000 Due To March in OCD Parade

Seven additional District and county organizations announced yesterday they would participate in tomorrow's civilian defense parade which will bring to 14,000 the number of persons expected to march.

The parade will mark the opening of two weeks' drive to recruit 20,000 additional civilian defense workers who are needed to augment the 48,000 already enlisted.

Those organizations which joined up yesterday are the National Park Service, whose unit will consist of 12 motorized pieces of equipment; the Irish War Veterans, the United States Daughters of 1812, the American Federation of Labor, which will have a float in the parade and a marching unit of 200.

Minute Men Will March

Others whose participation was announced yesterday include Montgomery County which will be represented by 10 companies of Minute Men and the Seventh Battalion Band led by Maryland State Guards: the National Security Women's Corps and the St. Augustine Junior Drill Team.

At the same time it was announced that the following men would serve as parade starters and expediters: Clarence Arata, Porter Lumpkins, William A. Van Duzer, Lieut. J. D. Harrington, Ed Carl, Maj. Ennalls Waggaman and Lieut. Col. Leonce R. Legendre.

The parade is heralded as one of the largest to be held in Washington in recent years and will mark the last time this year that military personnel, representing the three services, will be seen on parade. It will also be the first time that WACS, WAVES, SPARS and Women Marines will be seen in a parade here.

Awards for Air-Raid Wardens

The starting time has been set as 6:15 p. m. The parade will form on the lower mall on Constitution Avenue between Fourth and Seventh Streets Northwest. The route will be up Pennsylvania Avenue to Fifteenth Street, where it will disperse on the Ellipse.

Immediately after the dispersal, ceremonies will be held in front of the District Building at which awards will be made to several thousand air-raid wardens who have served from 500 to 3000 hours and over in volunteer work.

Services Are Held For C. A. Mason, Patent Attorney

Funeral services were held in Hines funeral home yesterday for Charles Alexander Mason, 77, Washington patent attorney who died Sunday while vacationing in Cape May, N. J. Burial was in Oak Hill Cemetery.

A son of James Madison Mason, a former patent attorney here, he was a native of Washington and resided at 107 West Underwood Street, Chevy Chase, Md.

An employe in the Patent Office from 1886 to 1910 Mr. Mason resigned to begin private practice as a patent and trade mark attorney.

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Althea E. Mason; two sons, J. M. Mason of Washington and James Mason of Chicago, Ill., and two daughters, Miss Marjorie E. Mason of Chevy Chase and Mrs. Frederick T. Crossley of West Hartford, Conn.

Postlude

Playing by Gordon Quartet Is Eminently Satisfactory

By Ray C. B. Brown

C. C. Cappel, in cooperation with the National Capital Park Service, presents the Gordon String Quartet (Jacques Gordon, Leon Temerson, William Carboni and Fritz Magg) in Meridian Hill Park on Wednesday night. Program: Quartet in E flat major, Op. 127 (Beethoven), Quartet in A minor (Carpenter), Quartet in D major, Op. 20, No. 4 (Haydn).

Clouds continuously veiled the sky last evening while the Gordon String Quartet played in Meridian Hill Park, and made the "Starlight Concert" a misnomer, but no rain spoiled the enjoyment of a sizeable audience. This was a fortunate circumstance, for it would have been regretable had there been any interruption to music performed so consentiently and with such an unassuming technical ease. Jacques Gordon selects his associates with a sure instinct, and the two new members of the foursome, Leon Temerson and William Carboni, filled the places of their predecessors so neatly that one noticed no difference in the integrity of the group.

BROWN

It is, of course, the leader of a quartet who determines the quality and the spirit of a performance, and the personality of Jacques Gordon has always ruled the quartet that he formed in 1921. His artistic sensitiveness and fine taste are the basis of the eloquence in the readings which have an admirable blend of emotional life and intellectual discrimination. The surety and balance of the playing, the refinement of the phrasing and the rhythmic vitality are eminently satisfactory.

The program was a happy one in its prevailing mood, and there was only one thing the matter with it—it was presented upside down. It should have begun with Haydn and ended with Beethoven, thus building a climax of strength. As it was, one felt a gradual lessening of concentration and a decline of spiritual vigor.

Haydn's D major quartet belongs in the set of six that were known to his contemporaries as the "Great" and the "Sun" quartets. As we estimate them today, they do not merit that designation, for they are not as great as many of his later quartets. The first movement and the finale of the D major are in Haydn's most humorous vein, enlivened with jests that are essentially comic in intent. The only meditative part is the mildly melancholic adagio, wherein a pathetically modulated theme is elaborated in four variations and wrought into a sturdy coda.

John Alden Carpenter's A minor quartet is one of the best American works in this genre. It has epigrammatic sharpness, delightful wit and is imbued with an authentic native quality. Carpenter has sometimes been accused with writing with a French accent, but in this case the only Gallic influence is found in the clarity and logic. The relations between the ideas is that of consistent thinking, and the music in its terse and impetuous course has no moments of rhetorical padding.

Beethoven's glorious E-flat major quartet is suffused with a spiritual happiness that leaves one with an indescribable feeling of elation. It is Beethoven in a mood of gallant heroism in a world of troubles, confident, assertive and triumphant. In structure it has many marvels, such as the repeated use of the "maestoso" prelude like supporting columns for the lovely and gracious line of the principal theme in the first movement.

Pan American Music

The solidarity of Latin America with the United States was musically expressed in a characteristic all-Latin program by the United States Navy Band and accompanying soloists last night in the first concert of the Pan American Union in its outdoor theater.

Opening with the Peruvian national anthem the program ran the gamut of Latin-American countries to include folksongs of Peru, a cornet solo, Guatemalan in theme, "El Son de la Lune," from Costa Rica; a Caribbean fantasy and "Ecuador," a stirring march from that mountained-ribbed land.

Especially well received by a capacity audience was Frederico Jiminez, baritone from Colombia. His singing of "O, Vida de Minha vida," a song of Brazil, brought cheers.

The program was dramatically interrupted by the President's talk to the Nation, to which was lent good neighborly emphasis by the presence of diplomatic representatives from the south.

Woman Dies Of Injuries in Auto Accident

D. C. traffic deaths this year . 49
Deaths this date last year ... 61
District total last year 108

Mrs. Mary Gentzler, 47, of 30 Franklin Street Northeast, died at Casualty Hospital yesterday of injuries suffered Saturday morning, when the automobile in which she was riding crashed into Garfield Monument.

The woman was a passenger, police said, in a car driven by Daniel J. Walsh, 43, of 1156 Abbey Place Northeast. Her husband, Charles Gentzler, 46, was with her and the three were riding in the front seat, it was said.

The car was traveling east on Maryland Avenue Southwest, and the driver apparently failed to see the monument within the circle at First Street. The machine hurtled the curb, ran up a short flight of steps and crashed into the statue.

Both Walsh and Gentzler were seriously hurt and last night were still confined at Casualty. The latter was not informed of his wife's death.

Marvin Henry Greene, 24, of 208 Piney Branch Road, Silver Spring, Md., suffered severe injuries last night when thrown from the motorcycle he was riding at Carroll and Laurel Avenues, Takoma Park, Md. He was treated for fractures of a leg and elbow and a hip injury by the Takoma Park Rescue Squad and removed to Washington Sanitarium.

'Yoke' Victims Fail to Identify Murder Suspects

In a special police line-up, Elbert Ringwood, 18, Atlanta, Ga., and Campbell W. Burnett, 17, Radford, Va., Negroes held in the bludgeon murder of Thomas H. White, 36, of 67 Randolph Street Northwest, last night faced 11 victims of recent "yoke" bandit sluggings and robberies.

None of those who scrutinized the youths could make positive identifications of them as those who had beaten and robbed them.

The two teen agers were returned to their cells, Ringwood to await action by the grand jury and Burnett by Juvenile Court.

At a coroner's hearing yesterday it was testified that Burnett confessed to slugging White with an 18-inch piece of pipe during a robbery in which Ringwood allegedly stole the slain man's wallet. Neither defendant took the stand.

2 Forfeit $25 On Charges of Insanitation

A restaurant owner and a grocery store owner forfeited $25 collateral yesterday on Health Department charges of insanitation, while Municipal Judge George D. Neilson asked for higher collateral to force defendants into court, where they face a maximum fine of $300.

The restaurant owner, Samuel Einwohner, 1342 Seventh Street Northwest, forfeited $25 on these charges: Mold and roaches inside a fountain unit, food and mold in cracks of ice cream unit, greasy sink, dirty refrigeration unit, dirty shelves, meat slicer, milk shaker and cup, sirup jugs, prescription room and toilets, dirty dress on employe, and too many flies.

Alfred S. Feldman, a grocery store operator at 322 Florida Avenue Northwest, forfeited $25 on charges fruit and vegetable counters had too many blow flies and gnats, and that he permitted dirty meat cutting block, dirty fish trays and bad odors.

In another warrant, Albert A. Footer, a delicatessen operator at 3333 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, is charged with permitting a dirty meat case, slime on bottom of meat case, dirty rags on shelf where meat is cut, dirty shelves and floor in back of meat case, exposed meat slicing machine. He posted $25 collateral and is scheduled to appear before Judge Neilson today.

Edward W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel, in a conference with Maj. Edward Kelly, superintendent of police, yesterday recommended that collateral be raised to $100 in health violation cases and that an attachment be issued to insure the appearance of offenders in court.

Judge Neilson said that he would impose even heavier fines in the future than he has in the past.

"These people don't seem to realize that they are not only hurting the war effort by permitting these insanitary conditions but are also violating moral laws by injuring an unknown and innocent public," he said.

Yesterday's forfeits brought to 51 the number of persons fined or who forfeited collateral in the Health Department's "clean up or close up" drive. The number is slowly decreasing however, since many restaurants have started using paper plates, cups and forks.

Youth Hurt in Fall

Wayne W. Edmonston, 16, of 2210 Shannon Place Southeast, suffered minor injuries last night when he fell 20 feet to the ground from a ferris wheel on a lot, 1310 Good Hope Road Southeast. He was removed to Casualty Hospital and treated for head and face cuts.

Cadet Corps Training Not Compulsory

Counsel Rules Out Plan After Citing 1907 Law to Back Up His Decision

Compulsory military training for students in Washington's senior high schools was declared illegal yesterday by Richmond B. Keech, corporation counsel.

Keech stated that a congressional law of 1907 made such training impossible in the high school system. The law holds that students may be excused from military training when disqualified by medical examiners, or upon written request of a parent or guardian.

Earlier in the month, G. C. Wilkinson and Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendents of schools, tried to make religious objections the sole grounds for nonparticipation.

Compulsory training had been advocated by Granville Gude, president of the Washington Board of Trade, and Mrs. P. C. Pellett, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, among other civic leaders.

"The cadet corps provided excellent officer material in World War I," Gude said in defending compulsory training.

"I see no objection to compulsory military training in view of the fact that Selective Service is taking 18-year-olds into military service," declared Mrs. Pellett. Cadet training is of inestimable value in emergency times.

Basing his ruling on the law of 1907, Keech held: "It is clear a boy must be excused from serving the cadet corps on the written request of parent or guardian, in the same manner he must be excused on certificate of a medical inspector."

What the next move to set up a compulsory training program will be was not divulged at Board of Education offices yesterday. School officers said the matter would be given further thought before taking whatever steps seem indicated.

Meanwhile, Board 31, at Thirteenth and Allison Streets Northwest, heard 10 cases and penalized 3 violators of the pleasure driving ban. Those found guilty were Paul J. Schwartz, 5409 Fourth Street Northwest, fined two A coupons; Gilbert R. Mendelsohn, 308 Farragut Street Northwest, one A coupen, and Arthur F. Cohen, 5016 Second Street Northwest, two C coupons.

Five Receive Bars

Sergt. McCarty Promoted

Sergt. Wilburn McCarty, jr., formerly press chief of the War Savings Staff of the Treasury Department here and now a Marine Corps combat correspondent somewhere in the Pacific, has been promoted to staff sergeant, it was announced by First Lieut. Jonathan Rice, Marine Corps Public Relations Officer. A graduate of Dartmouth College, Staff Sergeant McCarty was connected with various New York publications before working with the Treasury Department. He has been on overseas duty since January.

Orders Affecting Dogs

An amendment to the District health regulations, passed yesterday by the Commissioners, will enforce dog owners here who own animals bitten by a rabid dog either to destroy the dog within 48 hours or agree to quarantine it for a period of from 60 to 90 days.

The amendment further provided that the District poundmaster shall impound any dog known to have been bitten by a rabid dog and found on public property. If the owner of the dog does not call for the animal within 48 hours the regulations call for it being destroyed.

85 Negroes to Sing

A mixed chorus of 85 Negro voices, directed by Warner Lawson, dean of the School of Music of Howard University, will present a program of spirituals and hymns tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. at the Sylvan Theater.

The program, sponsored by the D. C. Recreation Department and the War Hospitality Committee, will feature a song from the home front, "It's Up to You."

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

DeGoofeyized World

Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey has joined the ranks of postwar planners. A comprehensive plan for a better world has been drawn up by the noted reformer and will be presented to Congress next fall.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"I saw that most of the planners were missing the things that really mattered, so I got into action," the president of the Do Something About It League told her press conference yesterday. "For instance, in none of the plans submitted by Beveridge or anyone else have I found that anything has been done about the nail polish bottle. Yet there is a problem that affects millions of women, in fact every woman who does her own nails."

"Have you a carbon copy of your prospectus on the postwar nail polish bottle?" asked a correspondent of the London Times?"

"No, but the main feature of it is that every bottle will have a brush long enough that half the polish won't be wasted." Gallons of nail polish are being thrown away every day simply because the brushes reach only halfway down the bottles. I suspect foul play is back of this—that it is a nefarious scheme to make women buy more polish.

Paste Pots Also To Be Reformed

"My postwar plan also calls for longer brushes in paste pots," continued Mrs. DeGoofey. "Countless numbers of women office workers daily get the jitters from trying to get paste out of a pot or jar when the brush won't reach it. The paste thickens and can't even be stirred because there is no way of reaching it without using your nail file or the scissors. Now why do we Americans stand for such a thing? Simply because we are nice.

"Also I expect to produce some postwar gadgets that really are needed. One of these will be an umbrella that will catch when it is lowered, one you can hang on your arm without its spreading open on you. I expect to have a can opener that is not so involved in its workmanship that you have to call in a graduate engineer to work it. Another one of my gadgets will be a typewriter whose ribbon you can change without first taking a course in motor mechanics. I am planning a fountain pen that won't leak and a pencil sharpener that won't invariably break the lead."

"I am glad you brought that up. I am going to have every one of the new pennies that look like dimes called in and replaced with something that looks like pennies. The confusion and arguments caused by these abominable new brassy pennies is contributing in a big way to wartime jitters."

Old Reforms To Be Included

Mrs. DeGoofey said her postwar plans also included the major reforms she had been working for the last eight years. Among these are:

Elimination of the purse on a string in a handbag so that women won't have to fish for their money when entering streetcars or paying their cafeteria bills.

Large printed placards to take the place of place cards at luncheons and eliminate the confused search of guests for their places.

Standardization of hors d' oeuvres so that hostesses will be spared the competition of outdoing each other at teas and cocktail parties.

The carrying of hunting sticks to large receptions and teas so that guests may occasionally sit down.

Abolishment of all buffet suppers at which tables, knives and folks are not provided.

Wider seats in women's slacks.

Public makeup booths in street corners, and free beauty salons in offices.

Better cooked and seasoned green vegetables in restaurants or else the muzzling of nutritionists who keep urging people to eat such food.

Mrs. DeGoofey said she would leave soon for the Middle West to take an opinion poll on her postwar plans of filling station attendants and barbecue stand operators.

All Wool and A Yard Wide!

By Ruth Gregory

Let the thermometer rush up to the bursting point. Let it burst. Break out in heat prickles, if you must, at talk of wool and fur. We still think that a find like this two-piece all-wool dress is something you ought to know about.

Technically, it's a dress, since the jacket is unlined, but in every other respect it's one of the smartest-looking little suits we've seen this year (we've seen plenty), and one of the really super values. Don't be fooled by the sables hanging on the lady's arm. This expensive-looking suit, 100 per cent wool, in a herringbone design (one of those subtle weaves that characterize the new fall fabrics), is only $23.

Here's that much-talked-of "suit look," the smart Chesterfield finish, rolled into a triple service garment. You'll wear it as a dress come early September; you'll wear it as a suit under coats come frost-time, and that neat little skirt can be combined with other jackets, sweaters, what you will.

Suits like this don't grow on trees, not in 1943, at any rate. It has the simplicity of line, the finely tailored detail that mark the work of top-flight (and top price) designers. It comes in those warm fall shades we've talked about before: a soft gray with black velveteen trimming; a wonderful oatmeal kind of shade combined with brown, and rich brown with brown.

If you're a size 10 or 20, or somewhere in between, this dress-suit, which is perhaps the best way to describe it, could be the kind of thing you've always wanted for yourself, but usually found was far beyond your means.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

"Why, most women would look better without these girdles than with them!" And that is the frank and outspoken opinion voiced by one buyer for an important string of stores as she looked over the girdle situation for fall.

So, ladies, you can see what you are up against. If that is the shape of things to come, you haven't much choice. It's exercise or bulge!

You can get your own muscular girdle back in condition any time you are willing to exercise, and it looks as though the time has come. As a matter of fact, that is all to the good. Aside from what it does for your figure, exercise does a lot for your health.

The prime purpose of your muscular girdle is to support the internal organs. To do this efficiently, it has to be strong enough to resist the downward tug of gravity. If in addition to letting the muscles go soft, you put on weight, then your muscular network becomes infiltrated with fat and you really have the middle-aged spread! The organs crowd against each other, the sagging gets worse and your health is affected.

It is a lot more important to put the elasticity back into these muscles than to get a girdle that holds you up. Not that you won't always look better for the right girdle! But make it the finishing touch, rather than your mainstay.

This set of exercises will do more for you than any girdle you can buy. Start with one to strengthen your antigravity muscles.

Position—Lying on back on floor, feet elevated, hands down at sides.

Movement — Flex alternate knees to chest. As you flex knees to chest, swing both arms straight up and back on floor overhead and press small of back to floor. Bring knees as close to chest as you can get it and stretch slim through the midriff.

Position—Lying on back on floor, knees flexed, feet on floor.

Movement—Dig small of back into floor as you pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles. Then slowly raise hips off floor until you are in a straight line from knees to chest and bring one knee to chest. Hold and lower hips to floor and then foot to floor. Relax and repeat six times, alternating knees to chest.

Position—Standing erect with feet parallel, hands clasped back of neck.

Movement—Stretch up and bend slowly to one side without letting hips bow out to other side or tensing muscles through the shoulders. (Having hands clasped back of neck helps keep shoulders down and relaxed.) Straighten up and bend to other side.

Fresh Berries

Berries shouldn't be washed until just before serving. If very ripe when you buy or pick them, Westinghouse home economists recommended putting them on a platter and covering lightly with wax paper. Store on next to bottom shelf of the refrigerator until ready to use.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It would be unusual if friends and relatives did not want to please a baby.

Because they do, they show their affection in several ways. They want to fondle the baby, they want to do something for it, they want to feed it. You know the feeling when love has to express itself in some tangible manner.

Unfortunately while these emotions are laudable ones, their mode of expression may not be. In an adult's yearning to kiss and hug the baby she may lift it from its comfortable bed and squeeze it so tightly the baby screams in fright. Babies do not like to have their own arms pinioned by others arms, however loving.

There are persons who can express their affection only by kissing the baby. This would be fine if they would choose to press their kisses on baby's neck or forehead or cheek. But no, they must kiss his rosebud mouth.

This arouses a perfect torment of fury in the heart of the mother. Shall she tell the woman what she thinks of her, or swallow her emotion and say nothing? The closer the baby's relationship to the kisser the harder the struggle for the mother.

Even if the adult can resist fondling the baby so exuberantly she never can throttle her desire to give it something to eat. Even though the baby may be too young to know anything about the "goodness" of candy no one can subdue the adult who wants to give it to him. "Oh, just a little piece, it's pure sugar, it can't hurt him."

Once the bars are down and the baby is given a taste, candy becomes that adult's trademark and he clamors for it at the sight of her or him.

Sometimes it is food from the adult's plate which it pleases her or him to present to baby. This creates another upheaval in the mother. How can anyone feed a baby from her own plate? It must be someone who is ignorant that every mouth is a hotbed of germs, which, however harmless to the individual, is no present to the baby.

It must be an insensitive person who is concerned neither with baby's good health nor the mother's unhappy emotions.

Persons might better show their affection for babies by caring for them, by walking, playing, singing to them, or feeding them their own desirable menus. It is no sign of wisdom to override all the mother's practices and then proclaim you do it only because you love the baby so. Those who really love babies think first of what is pleasant and profitable to them, not what is satisfying to their own affectionate or generous natures.

For Vitamins' Sake

Fresh vegetables, such as carrots, radishes, beets and the like, should be thoroughly cleaned before you refrigerate them, and the stems and leafy portions should be removed. Don't shell peas and lima beans or husk corn until ready to use. Otherwise they'll lose their swetness and most of their vitamins Westinghouse home economists say.

Looks Aren't Deceiving

Vegetables aren't fresh unless they look fresh, plump, full bodied, not wilted and shriveled, says Mrs. Julia Kiene, director of Westinghouse Home Economics Institute. She adds that pods of peas, lima beans and such should be moist, not dry, and well filled. Leafy vegetables are best if leaves are young, unwilted and free from yellowness.

College-Trained Parents of 3 Children Reach Domestic Crisis With Wife's Angry Decision to Work in War Plant, to Meet Family's Expenses

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am seeking your help in a matter of great distress. My wife is 24 and I am 28. We have three children—a daughter aged 4 and two sons, one of whom is 2½ and the other a year old. I work very hard and make only a modest salary; and we are buying a modest but comfortable home in the suburbs. Three months ago, my wife went to work in a war plant, to bring in money to help meet expenses.

Her efforts to find a housekeeper to take care of the children have been highly unsatisfactory. After five women had come and gone, she gave up her job and stayed home. But today, after a heated altercation with me, she went back to her job, leaving a very young girl to do the housework. She said she could not stand the monotony and dullness of staying at home; that she is tired of the duties and surroundings of the home. She said she just had to get out every day. (I might say that she does get out to visit people as much as most young wives do, who have similar responsibilities.)

I got angry at her, which I seldom do;—but it was useless. She refused to see my viewpoint. I feel, and I should think she would feel, a great responsibility toward the children; and would feel that they should not be left in incompetent hands during these important preschool years. I am well aware that she has borne quite a burden in having three children in rapid succession; and that her social life has been limited by the children. But we wanted this family and "planned" the children; and they certainly need a mother's care. What can I do to bring about a satisfactory solution of this unhappy situation? We are both college graduates, by the way. I shall appreciate a prompt reply. Sincerely,

WORRIED HUSBAND.

Wife Is Carrying Too-Heavy Burden

DEAR W. H.: It occurs to me that a fundamental change for the better in this unhappy situation can only be achieved through a substantial increase in your individual earnings. It seems odd, indeed, in these days of the much-discussed "employes' market,"—i. e., when in business and industry good jobs paying good money are "going begging" for able takers,—that you, a college graduate, should be in the dead-end position of "working very hard and making only a modest salary." So modest, in fact, that your wife's original decision to go to work was based on a mutually recognized need of more money "to help meet expenses."

It were futile in this crisis to deplore or condemn your wife's hysterical rebellion against the frustrating monotony of a semi-imprisoning domestic routine which keeps her nose to the grindstone in a losing fight to balance the family budget, in the face of inexorably rising costs of living. One easily could, of course, make a strong and even unarguably convincing case against her rather frantic rejection of her first responsibility to be a dutiful and competent on-the-job mother to her three small children. But the plain fact is that after deliberately inviting the precise amount of maternal responsibility that is hers today (an ambitious and positive course of past action in marriage that stands to her credit), she finds it beyond her strength to support, in circumstances that have subsequently materialized.

Exhaustion and Panic Underlie Her Decision

She has come up against the discovery that she overreached herself, in tackling the proposition of trying to rear three children and make possible the purchase of a home at the same time, on your modest salary. And that discovery has reduced her emotionally (by a process of nervous exhaustion) to a state of trapped panic,—so that her current "irresponsible" attitude cannot fairly be judged in terms of "reasonable behavior;" but rather demands to be correctly understood, if it is to be constructively dealt with. In taking more upon herself than she can endure in the existing conditions, it may be that she miscalculated her powers of physical and nervous endurance. Or, it may be that both of you had optimistically counted on a steady increase in your salary, that has not been forthcoming; or, that you had pardonably failed to foresee the painful shrinkage of the war-time dollar. But in any event, it seems clear that her initial intentions and efforts were of "responsible" sort,—which obliges one to look with more sympathy and concern than with censure on her recent breakdown in morale.

It appears that her first excursion into the paid work field had your blessing;—in other words, that you conceded the urgent necessity of additional income to relieve serious financial pressure at home. And doubtless her individual willingness to become a wage earner was based on the sincere conviction that in so doing, she could be of most benefit to the family. The "rightness" of her intentions seems affirmed by the fact that when results on the home front proved demoralizing for all concerned, owing to lack of dependable household help, she "gave up her job and stayed home." But by this time, that state of trapped panic aforementioned had begun to overwhelm her;—so that finally she felt driven, in very defense of her sanity, to "break loose" in a mood of reckless desperation and return to her job. I am convinced she was speaking the alarming truth when she said "she just had to get out every day;"—out and away from a situation that, as it stands, has become more than she can endure without "going to pieces."

Challenge to Husband To Improve His Earnings

Granted that, by norm standards of conduct, this seems treason to duty; a shocking and callous renunciation of responsibility to the children,—still, if that is the way she feels, it means she has reached the breaking point; and that the children stand to suffer no more from makeshift care in her day-time absence than they would suffer under the influence of her distrait full-time presence. And, also, that the job may very well be a lifeline to draw her back from the abyss of nervous collapse,—which would spell bankrupting expense to you and might permanently unfit her to "think" for the children. I believe you should regard her performance as that of a person fighting to survive a dangerous subjective crisis, when "saving herself" is her instinctive first concern,—and when it is perhaps the lesser of two evils to neglect the children in some part, for the time being. And I think you should soberly recognize the whole troubled situation as an imperative challenge to yourself, to aggressively promote a change of employment that will put you in receipt of an income sufficient to the family's needs,—an income that will permit your wife to stay home on her child-tending job with peace of mind; and with funds at her disposal to hire a part-time helper, so that she may have regular recesses from the domestic grind; recesses which you yourself would demand as a sanity-saving necessity, if you had spent a season in her shoes. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

If there are cooks who are not trying to add new flavor to old recipes I haven't come in contact with them. You don't have to be in conversation with a woman or a group of women very long before they are telling how wonderful they have made some dish just by giving it a new twist.

Martha Ellyn

One way to give a new twist to food is to add a bit of prepared mustard. Not just any mustard, but the kind that has more flavorful brown mustard seeds blended with other savory seasonings.

Why do you use salt in cooking? Not merely to give a salty taste. Salt brings out the full flavor in foods. When you spread mustard on meats before cooking you enjoy a new taste thrill. The seasonings in good mustard bring out the rich hidden flavor of the meat.

If you are cooking hamburgers these days, try including a tablespoon or so of mustard in the mixture before cooking. When cooking pot roasts, baked ham, chops or making gravy, add a bit of full-flavored brown mustard and see if it doesn't provide a delightful flavor change.

The frankfurter is one meat that we are using these days in lieu of other meats. But there is more to cooking a frankfurter than merely heating, thrusting it into a roll, and calling it a job well done. Let's use them on today's menu with some fluffy mashed potatoes. But let's give the frankfurters special treatment with Mustard Butter.

Frankfurters become something extra-special when topped with spicy mustard butter. Be sure to use the kind of mustard which is more flavorful because of the brown mustard seeds blended with other savory seasonings. Then top fluffy mashed potatoes with these mustard-treated franks and you will have a dish worthy of special mention

Dinner Menu

Vegetable Juice Cocktail
Frankfurters on Mashed Potatoes
Carrot-Cabbage Salad
Enriched Bread Butter
Apple Dumplings
Iced Tea

Steam or heat frankfurters in boiling water. Mash potatoes and place in oven dish. Arrange frankfurters on top the potatoes. Carefully top each frankfurter which has been split lengthwise, with mustard butter. Place under broiler and allow to brown lightly. Serve at once.

MUSTARD BUTTER—Cream together 2 tablespoons rich brown mustard with some butter. Add minced parsley or chives and chopped olives. Spread on the frankfurters and proceed as given above. This mustard is also fine to use to spread sandwich bread, hot toast and crackers or canapes.

Market Report For Fruits and Vegetables

Washington homemakers might make this week "Tomato Canning Week," as the season for home-grown tomatoes is well under way. The consistently hot weather has caused these tomatoes to be marketed a little earlier than usual, and they now are plentiful on the wholesale market. They are of fine quality and ripe, just right for canning, and their price has dropped over last week. They afford a good opportunity to store away some precious Vitamin C for use next winter.

Other "bargain vegetables" at this time, are green beans, potatoes, cucumbers, corn and green peppers. These vegetables are plentiful and all are of good quality, according to the Market Reporter of the Food Distribution Administration, who has daily contact with the Washington wholesale market. Potatoes, green beans and cucumbers are wearing lower price tags than a week ago. The price of corn and green beans is the same as it has been.

Carrots are plentiful enough to meet the demand. They are from California, are both bunched and topped, and their quality is very good. Supplies of celery and okra are increasing. The price of celery is a bit lower, and its quality varies from fair to good. Okra is of good quality and reasonably priced. The supply of eggplant, a newcomer to the market, is increasing, but it is selling at a high level. The supply of Western iceberg lettuce, the same as last week, and it is selling at ceiling prices. There are plenty of beets, of good quality, to go around, and their price is the same as it has been.

The weather has been against this year's fruit crops, and they haven't fared so well. Consequently fruits are scarce and high. Cantaloupes and watermelons are the "headliners" in the fruit line. Cantaloupes now are coming from the Maryland Eastern Shore. Their supply is light at present, but will be heavier by the end of the week. Watermelon prices are edging lower, and they are of good quality.

Pears reached the Washington market for the first time last week, and they are in light supply. Although their price trend is downward, they are still in the high priced bracket. These pears are the Mountain Bartlett variety, tops in flavor, and of fine quality.

Pineapples from Florida are increasing, and they are coming down in price. Apples and peaches are of good quality but scarce and expensive.

Your Club President

Mrs. Benjamin Soule Gantz Brings Humor To Conduct of the Political Study Club

By Genevieve Reynolds

She's a club president with a sense of humor. Cutting red tape is no novelty to her—and she does it daringly, but with finesse.

REYNOLDS

For Mrs. Benjamin Soule Gantz, new president of the Political Study Club possesses both originality and courage.

Born in Georgetown—her grandfather was one of the chief citizens of the historic city—she probably knows more native Washingtonians than many of the Cave Dwellers. Her birthplace was at 3021 N Street Northwest—the house now owned by Senator Millard Tydings. After attending college at Front Royal, Va., she joined the Navy, as it were. With her husband, Captain Gantz, she's lived in Shanghai, Hawaii, the Philippines and has visited Cuba and several other Latin-American countries.

Tall, slender Mrs. Gantz loves China and its people. She says that they have plenty of initiative, coupled with a keen sense of humor. Asked to do something, their answer is "Can do," and they usually accomplish what they set out to achieve. This positive thinking, she believes, will go a long way in helping the Chinese to obtain a new order—a progressive form of democracy.

Opportunities for Women

She tells me that in the post-war world, women will find many openings there in press and radio work—also in the educational field. Comparing the old China with the new—she's seen both—Mrs. Gantz declared that the women are working side by side with men, on the battlefield as well as in industry.

"If China gets a square deal, we will have stanch friends in the postwar world," she declared, "They won't bite the hand that feeds them."

As leader of the Political Study Club, Mrs. Gantz intends to specialize in war work—"Effective war work is the only reason for a club's continued existence now," she asserted.

Members Aid in War

You'll find the club members busily selling War Bonds and Stamps, active in Red Cross work, aiding rationing boards.

In order to get the best programs, eliminate long-drawn-out meetings. Mrs. Gantz has inaugurated the "Headache Box." Members will drop their complaints as well as constructive suggestions in the box, and the headache chairman in charge will pass them along to Mrs. Gantz, who in turn will separate the wheat from the chaff.

During World War I Mrs. Gantz sang at Army camps.

MRS. BENJAMIN GANTZ

Practically every organization in town gave her a certificate for her outstanding contribution to the war. Once she sang at the White House for President Wilson by special request. However, now, she says she has lost her singing voice—otherwise you'd still find her entertaining the soldiers.

Action in Organizations

Serving as president of organizations is no novelty for Mrs. Gantz. She is a former national president of the American Woman's Legion of World Wars; president of the Washington Stonewall Jackson Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy; Flanders Field Unit, American Legion Auxiliary. Also, she has been first vice president of the Colonial Dames of the Seventeenth Century.

Kind, gay and sympathetic, Mrs. Gant loves people and they love her. The other day we were riding in a taxicab. Hot and tired, the cab driver became infuriated with some careless driver and vented his wrath in no uncertain terms. By a few jokes she reprimanded the driver for losing his temper. At the end of our journey she had the driver in an excellent humor, and apologetic.

Bridge and people are her hobbies. Frankly, she says that having fun and avoiding bores was her before-the-war aim. But beneath her gaiety you'll see her seriousness of purpose and intent when it comes to worth-while things. But you can be sure that no matter how important a job is, you will not find her wearing a long, solemn expression. Make no mistake, though, she will get that job done well, and on time.

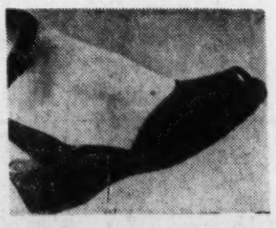
Ten specially trained senior hostesses at the USO Club operated by the Y. M. C. A., at 1736 G Street Northwest have been inducted into the nation-wide Volunteer Service Organization, the senior contingent of the 125,000 women who are assisting USO clubs, managed by the Y. M. C. A. in this country.

Mrs. Janet King, assistant director of the local YM-USO, yesterday announced this reorganization of her hostesses and the election of Miss Jo Webb as their president by the new group, nucleus of a larger group to be known at this Y as its VSO. Mrs. King visited New York last week to confer with Miss Eleanor Wilson, national director of all professional and volunteer women workers in YMCA-USO operations.

Lester Ellis, director of this USO, announced that registrations for hostesses have closed for some time, and that all those now registered must obtain their identification cards either from him or VSO leaders assigned to them.

More Unrationed Shoes

Still moaning about shoe rationing? Take a look at these uncouponed beauties and you'll change your tune.



They're very well-made shoes, both pairs, in a kind of upholstery fabric that looks even better than gabardine and wears as well. Nice detail inside, too, with the grosgrain lining and fine stitching detail that isn't found in cheap shoes. Although we haven't had them on our own feet, they look wonderfully comfortable—that plastic sole has the resiliency of leather.

Very smart-looking. That ankle-strap one is a knockout. They both are available in brown at the moment and in all sizes (shipments are expected soon in black as well as navy).

For about $5, you'll have a lot of people looking at your feet, whether you're traipsing down the street or tucked behind your desk.

Coming Up, New Song Of War—'Let's Go'

Capt. and Mrs. William H. Smith Write Words and Music to Lively, Lilting Tune

By Peggy Preston

Everyone complains about the dearth of good war songs, but few seem to do anything about it.

That's what Capt. William H. Smith, U. S. Navy, and his wife decided was wrong with the picture, and forthwith they put their heads together to see what they could do about the matter.

The result is 'Let's Go," a lively, lilting war song, with words by the captain himself, and the score by Mrs. Smith, the musician in the family. Known professionally as Edith Virden Smith, Mrs. Smith has sung and taught voice for many years, and is, as she puts it, a real music lover.

"We decided that the only really good piece of music that has come out of this war is the Army Air Corps song," she explained. "So, we thought we'd try our hands at one ourselves."

"Let's Go," which is now on its way to a New York publisher, just may prove to possess that elusive quality that will make it succeed with the public where most of the new war songs have failed. The Smiths wrote it with no commercial ideas in mind, but when a friend offered to make a record of it, they were pleased and have had a lot of fun playing it for friends at their Shoreham apartment.

Music Is Fresh, Words Catchy

"Everyone seems to like it," says Mrs. Smith, and well they might, for the music is fresh and pleasing and the words catchy.

Here are the words to the chorus that one day soon you may hear over your radio:

Let's Go! Let's Go!
By land, by sea, by air.
Let's Go! Let's Go!
Let all our foes beware.
We're right. We'll fight
To Rome, Berlin and Tokyo.
Let's Go! Let's Go!

Captain and Mrs. Smith have lived in Washington from time to time over a period of 25 years. They began their latest tour of duty here last winter when the captain, an engineer, was transferred from the Brooklyn Navy Yard to his present post at the Navy Department. He is currently director of the design division in the Bureau of Yards and Docks.

Though his background is hardly one befitting that of a writer of songs, Captain Smith has frequently written down words to the music worked out by his wife. "It is our hobby," Mrs. Smith explains. "But this is the first time we've tried this type of song. It was brought on by the fact that we both have a stake in this war and feel it so strongly that we wanted to put it down on paper."

Is Native of Philadelphia

Mrs. Smith, a native Philadelphian, has known good music for almost as long as she can remember. She had her first taste of it during the golden age of opera in the '90's, when her mother had a box at the Philadelphia Opera House. After her marriage to Captain Smith she continued her interest in singing and while he was stationed in Panama she organized the famous Choral Club there.

At present her son is in Sicily with his ship and her brother is seeing service with the Coast Guard. Both she and the captain hope that some time they will hear "Let's Go," via short wave, and know that they provided the inspiration.

Costa Rica Purchases New Embassy

The Ambassador of Costa Rica and Senora de Escalante, who have been living at Hotel 2400 since their arrival in Washington in May, expect to take possession of the new embassy just purchased by the Costa Rican government at 2112 S Street. The house has been unoccupied since the death of its owner, Mrs. Stokes Halkett.

Senora de Escalante had hoped to be able to bring enough furnishings from Costa Rica to furnish one or two rooms of the new Embassy in typical Costa Rican style. However, with wartime restrictions on shipping, she will do most of her purchasing in this country.

Costa Rica has many beautiful native woods which go into the making of fine furniture. There would be one handicap, however, in transporting these pieces for use in the United States, and that is our modern heating system. In Costa Rica the climate is practically the same the year around. Much of the furniture there is of the veneer type, which would be unable to withstand the changes of temperature such as it would have to face in steam-heated houses in this country.

Looks as if Harry Hopkins Will Give Up White House Bed and Board, at Last; Great 'Clean-Up' in Process At Mexican Embassy, Conservatory Is Redecorated

The Harry Hopkinses are house-hunting.

After being guests at the Executive Mansion ever since their marriage, they've at last decided to move out early in September . . . IF they can find a place that suits them. They've toyed with the idea of leasing a number of houses in recent months, but have never found one that fits the bill. Just now they're considering a Georgetown place in the $450 bracket, but there are two or three features that don't quite please them. After being conditioned to White House living, it's probably twice as hard to find any other home that would be half as comfortable, convenient . . . and classy.

Mrs. Hopkins

The minute the Hopkinses move—IF they do, ever—you can be sure haters of the old New Deal will have a field day, construing the shift as being politically expedient, and another indication the President is trying to pacify taxpayers all over the country who have howled loud and often about Harry Hopkins' being a perpetual White House resident. Actually, however, it's Mrs. Hopkins—not the President—who is prompting the move. For some time she has been telling intimates she and her husband would "move out soon—as soon, anyway, as we can find a house. I want a home of my own."

Most Hostesses Feel That Way . . .

My womanly (or perhaps womanish) intuition tells me Mrs. Roosevelt will be mighty glad to see them go, no matter how warmly she may have urged them to linger as long as they liked. Even the most delightful of guests can wear out their welcome . . . and the extended Hopkins sojourn at the White House has all the earmarks of another man-who-came-to-dinner affair.

TOWN TOPICS: "Who's that man in the Indian turban?" is a question heard frequently around the Mayflower lounge the past few days. No, that tall, commanding figure, wearing traditional Indian attire and floating in every so often with a party of friends, is not a crystal-gazing swami who will tell your fortune. He's Sir S. S. Malik, Indian Trade Commission, who comes to Washington frequently to confer with members of the Indian Supply Mission. And he chooses to negotiate a lot of his business over a Mayflower table . . . Also putting in frequent appearances at the same lounge is Prince Obolensky, now an Air Corps officer, who wears the largest wrist watch ever seen in Washington . . . Attractive Mrs. Jack Crysler, former model, Edith Backus, has deserted sweltering Washington, for the time being at least. She's at East Hampton's ocean front Sea Spray Inn. That spot seems to be gathering its share of the glamour set this season . . . Visiting her in-laws in Ottawa is Mrs. Edward Treglown. She'll be back in town—and at her USO duties in Union Station—early next month.

For at least 22 years—it was that long ago that the Mexican government acquired the home built originally by the late Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh as a gift to her husband, Secretary of the Treasury in the Taft Administration—the embassy has gathered grime unmolested. Now its facade, which looks like an elongated cracker box, is being subjected to a sand-blasting process that makes plenty of noise but removes every atom of dirt. Already bleached by at least three tones is half the building. The remainder will be completed within two weeks.

Inside, meanwhile, minor repairs also are under way, and members of the embassy staff are spending a good bit of their time admiring the newly decorated conservatory that opens off the largest embassy dining room in Washington.

A 'Glass Curtain' All in Tile . . .

Eight months ago, four artists came up from Mexico City on commission to make the hothouse a bower of beauty, if there ever was one. Using colorful, Mexican-manufactured tile, they decorated the walls in artistic patterns; surrounded the wall fountain with a magnificent motif framing coats of arms of all the Mexican States; included one panel that is a copy in tile of the famous Tiffany-designed "glass curtain" of the Theater of Fine Arts in Mexico City.

Mexican Envoy

Pretty proud of the whole thing is the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, who now has a new and lovely home for his canaries, parakeets and palms. Incidentally, the Ambassador returns today from Montreal. Senora de Castillo Najera likes the newly done-over conservatory, too. ("It's so typically Mexican," she says.) And agreeing with her are her current house guests, Luis Davila, her eldest brother, and his wife, of Nogales, Sonora, and their 12-year-old daughter, who arrived here recently for a visit.

When the weather turns cooler, and outside cleaning is finished, there'll probably be a reception at the embassy . . . in honor of the renovation.

Mme. Georges-Picot, Mme. Schiaparelli Leaving Soon for 'Adventure' in Algiers

Their Work With Women of North Africa May Change Fashion Face of the World; Plans Divulged at Party

Friends of Mme. Guillaume Georges-Picot say there probably has never been a dull moment in her life—not in Washington, anyway. When she is not taking an advanced course in something or other at a university, she is planning to take one; or she is entertaining; or she is getting a suntan in a sailboat on the Potomac; or she is writing about some of her fascinating and unique experiences in Russia, Tibet, India, China or France.

Just now, however, she has a new set of exciting plans under way.

Some time next month, accompanied by Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli, she and her children will be off to North Africa, where M. Georges-Picot, former member of the French Embassy here, has been for several months. He is in charge of the civil cabinet under General Giraud, and when the latter was here recently, he urged Mme. Georges-Picot to go to Algiers as soon as possible because, as he put it, "There is work for you to do."

At a gaily informal farewell party yesterday in her home on Twenty-second Street, she told something of what that work would be. With Mme. Schiaparelli's adroit help, she will help to organize the women of North Africa into material-producing units. Mme. Schiaparelli will show them how to design and make dresses, hats and coats, not only for themselves but, possibly, for export purposes. Before it's all over, smart women from all over the world may be flocking to Algiers to purchase their wardrobes. The team of Schiaparelli and Georges-Picot may change the fashion face of the world.

"But I do hate to leave Washington and my many friends here," wailed Mme. Georges-Picot yesterday. Mme. Schiaparelli, chatting in French with first one guest and then the other, said she didn't particularly mind leaving the United States. "Algiers is so much closer home," she added, thinking of course of her beloved Paris, where she ruled as fashion queen for many years. She is the houseguest of Mme. Georges-Picot.

Others present at the 6-to-8 get-together included the Turkish Ambassador, Munir Ertegun; the Minister of Thailand and Mme. Seni Pramoj, who have taken a cottage for the summer in Sherwood Forest; the Minister of Portugal and Mme. Bianchi, accompanied by the latter's daughter, Miss Sibella Skidelsky.

Miss Sue Rosenberg was telling friends she would be off to Rochester, N. Y., soon "to spend a month, just resting, and reading." The Spanish Minister Attache and Senora de Danis said they also hoped to get away for a vacation soon. Senora de Danis was making her first party appearance after a week's stay in the hospital. Miss Maria Frias arrived with Mrs. George Kent. Dr. and Mrs. Louis Scholz, who were among those interned by the Japanese when Thailand fell, chatted with the Thai Minister. Several members of the Giraud military mission here came in and so did a number of other guests—all expressing regret tha tMme. Georges-Picot was leaving Washington.

"Well, I'll be here a little while longer," she said, "but I've already started placing." If her current plans work out on schedule, however, she may get away to New England for a brief visit with Mrs. Demarest Lloyd next week. The trip to North Africa probably will start late in August.

Maj. and Mrs. J. T. L. McNew of College Station, Tex., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth McNew, to Lieut. Don Dale Little, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Little of Homer, La. Walter Wolfe, pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Arlington, officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a dressmaker suit of powder blue with Navy blue accessories and a corsage of white orchids. Mrs. W. C. Holley, aunt of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing a Navy blue sheer crepe with white accessories. Her flowers were pink rosebuds.

Army Officer Takes Bride In Scotland

On a honeymoon trip in the north of Scotland and Edinburgh are Lieut. Edward Russell Brown, U. S. A., of Arlington, Va., and his bride, the former Miss Catherine Ruth Gordon of Glasgow, Scotland. They were married in the Church of Scotland on July 20.

The bride is an American citizen and was born in the Philippine Islands while her father was serving with the United States Army there. Since neither of her parents is now living, she was given in marriage by her uncle. She was attended by her sister, an officer in the Women's Army of Great Britain, and her cousin, an officer in the British Naval Corps. A reception followed the ceremony.

$100,000 Suit Filed Against Carmen Martin

Mrs. Carmen Beach Martin, 29, now serving a one-to-three-year sentence after being convicted of white slavery in the operation of a "call house" which evidence showed catered to Latin-American diplomats, was sued for $100,000 in an alienation of affections action yesterday in District Court.

The complaint was filed by Attorney Morris Benson for Mrs. Netta B. Martin, divorced wife of Carmen Martin's present husband, Charles Earl Martin, Navy pharmacist. It is charged that Carmen Martin "wantonly, deliberately, wrongfully, unlawfully, maliciously planned to alienate plaintiff's husband from her."

Stating that throughout the 14 years that she was married to Martin she was "infatuated and deeply in love" with him, Netta Martin states that in 1940 she saw Martin slipping from her and tried to prevail on Carmen to relinquish him, but that it was futile.

Netta Martin, who resides at 620 Twenty-second Street Northwest, is 49 years old, Benson said. Martin is 43 years old and is on active duty with the Navy. Carmen Martin is 29 years old, was born in Spain and was prominent as a rumba dancer at local night clubs.

Netta obtained a divorce from her husband on October 9, 1942, charging desertion. According to Martin's testimony in the Carmen trial, he had been living with Carmen for three years before he married her in January of this year.

Harry Whelan, attorney for Carmen, said that he had accepted service in the suit and that he would confer with Carmen in jail before filing his answer.

Prostitution Trial Ends in Guilty Verdict

Joseph Jack Giasulla, 28, former boxer, was convicted by a District Court jury late yesterday of two white-slavery charges in transporting a 29-year-old former burlesque theater dancer to Washington for purposes of prostitution. The jury deliberated less than five minutes.

Giasulla took the verdict, under which he is subject to a penalty of up to 10 years, calmly. However, as he was being taken down to the cell block he began to sob and remonstrate with fellow prisoners.

Katherine Loveall, 29, dancer and Giasulla's common-law wife, was the chief Government witness in the case. She testified that she was picked up by Giasulla on Forty-second Street, New York City, and that while she lived with him for two years he acted as her procurer.

She testified that in 1942 she became a prostitute here at a low-price hotel at Giasulla's behest. The second charge was that he brought her here in June, 1942, to be a prostitute, but a hotel manager turned her in to police when she tried to arrange dates with a bellhop.

Giasulla's defense was that he knew that Miss Loveall was a prostitute but that he had nothing to do with her activities, merely traveling over the country with her while she danced in theaters and night clubs and while she was a prostitute.

YES, FREDDIE! I KNOW YOU'RE ON YOUR VACATION, BUT I THOUGHT IF YOU WERE COMING DOWN-TOWN YOU MIGHT LIKE TO LOOK OVER SOME OF YOUR MAIL!
THANKS, MARTHA, BUT I WOULDN'T LEAVE THE QUIET OF MY LITTLE HOME FOR ALL THE MAIL IN THE POST OFFICE!
WHAT'S THAT BUZZING NOISE?
OH, THAT'S JUST SUSIE RUNNING THE VACUUM-CLEANER! YOU'D GET USED TO THAT, IF YOU LIVED AROUND HERE!
HOLD THE 'PHONE
JUST REMEMBER THAT THE NEXT TIME FREDDIE SQUAWKS ABOUT THE SOUND OF AN ELECTRIC FAN!

America Is Still The Land Of Plenty

• America's war-time economy demands that all Americans adjust themselves to the new tempo of a nation-at-war.

• Waste is unthinkable . . Extravagance is out . . and Lavish Splurging on Needed Commodities is in strict violation of our country's objectives.

• America's retailers are thus faced with a dual problem . . (first) to support the Government's economic program . . and (second) to give every consumer an equal opportunity to secure the essentials for daily living.

• These problems can be simplified a million-fold if the consumers of America will exercise moderate restraint in their purchases . . . and give a thought to the "other fellow"and his needs . . a spirit of fairness which is typically American.

• As we approach the month of August, America's retail stores customarily prepare large supplies of WHITE GOODS . . because it has been traditional for American housewives to replenish their needs at this season of the year.

• Consequently, we have provided the best possible stocks of White Goods . . sheets, and towels and spreads and comforters and blankets . . and the countless essential commodities that are needed in every home . . all at regular prices.

• Adequate stocks, you ask? Yes . . . adequate for every reasonable, normal, sensible, legitimate need of our consumers . . IF every American will buy only the things he needs.

• Uncle Sam has not asked any of us to forego the necessities of civilidn life. He wants us to have a clean sheet for the bed . . a good towel for the bath . . and a warm blanket to sleep under when the cold winds begin to blow.

• We have those things for you . . in ample quantities . . in the best assortments at our command . . and we have enough to assure adequate supplies for our customers . . IF everybody is satisfied with his share.

• We ask our patrons to take careful check of their household needs at this time . . and where it is necessary to replenish supplies, we stand ready to serve you . . with the White Goods you customarily purchase at this time of the year. You'll find them in good assortment . . and fairly priced . . in the Domestic Departments of The Hecht Co.

• But we'd like to repeat this vital thought . . Before you buy make sure you'll need the things you're buying . . so that everyone will get an equal share.

President's Talk Bid for Soldier Vote, Says G.O.P.

Address Launched Fourth-Term Campaign, Say Spangler and Others

'Annihilation' Aim

Post Staff Writer

Harrison E. Spangler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, charged yesterday that President Roosevelt in his Wednesday night speech had "launched his campaign for a fourth . . . term" and had made a "bold bid" for the soldier vote in 1944.

"Every American is determined to take care of these returning heroes," Spangler said, "and it will be the Nation that does it and not a personal beneficence of the President."

Spangler formally requested the Office of War Information and the War and Navy Departments to see to it that his remarks, together with the comment of others, are published in Army newspapers and ships bulletins and otherwise communicated to the forces overseas.

Benefits "Dangled"

Earlier several other politicians, including at least one Democrat, expressed the opinion that President Roosevelt had opened his campaign for a fourth term. They particularly noted his "dangling" of Government benefits "before the eyes of the soldiers."

However, Senator Guffey (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, an ardent supporter of the New Deal, said he could see no "political aspects" to the President's total victory speech.

Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith (Democrat) of South Carolina, a White House critic, saw the speech as "a bid for the soldiers' vote for a fourth term." He also thought it significant that the President had announced that coffee rationing was over and that more sugar was on the way.

"It's my opinion," the South Carolinian said, "that we will see more letting up on rigid rationing as time goes on. That's all a part

839,013 Civilians In D. C. Reported By Census Bureau

Washington's civilian population has reached 839,013 as of March 1, an increase of 180,995 since April 1, 1940, the Census Bureau announced yesterday.

This figure showed an increase of 27.5 over 1940 but it did not include the population in nearby Maryland and Virginia. Washington's metropolitan population has been estimated at more than a million persons.

The civilian population nationally decreased 3,100,000, the bureau said, with only the District and 12 states showing actual increases. The greatest drop was in New York State, 654,892, and the largest percentage decline was in North Dakota, 16.4 per cent.

Give Air Power Its Wings

MR. PRESIDENT:

TWO statements stuck out of your report to the Nation Wednesday night which merit reflection. One was your praise of the "wise and skillful leadership" of General Eisenhower. The other was your dismissal of the distinction between the fighting front and the home front. You stated that the two fronts are "inexorably tied together."

As we see it, Mr. President, your two statements are interrelated, though you yourself did not establish the connection. We propose to do just that.

The plain fact is that there are two fronts. And no amount of haranguing will unite them. What will make them one and indivisible is the establishment in Washington of the "wise and skillful leadership" for which you justly praised General Eisenhower. What is the secret of Eisenhower's "wise and skillful leadership?" In a word, proper organization. Let us go tc Eisenhower, then, for a lesson in organization. As one illustration: start at the military end. As commander in chief, Eisenhower recognized realities and picked three deputies for land, sea, and air: Alexander, Cunningham, and Tedder—they are all equal. That equality, topped by Eisenhower's authority, insures superb teamwork.

There is no similar pattern on the home front. That hampers the organization at the fighting front. That is what makes the men in the fighting lines call Washington the home front, among other things. The fighting front gets a runaround in Washington when supreme decisions are sought—because the setup is different.

THE situation could be remedied easily. Eisenhower has an up-to-date organization. Here in Washington you are directing the war with the organization of World War I. Air power is missing among your deputies. There is no Tedder. General Arnold is not a deputy to you as Commander in Chief, but is subordinate to General Marshall as Army Chief of Staff, and is so regarded by the Navy. Your deputy for AIR should be in control of AIR whether AIR is used in cooperation with the Army or in cooperation with the Navy. The present setup is land and sea, as of old. You are keeping air power in Cinderella's role. Even the traditional British are not so hidebound. In London they have a duplicate of Eisenhower's organization in three chiefs of staff under Winston Churchill.

That is why, on the military side, Mr. President, the fighting and home fronts are not "inexorably tied together." You can tie them together by a stroke of your august pen. It is the fault of leadership that it has not been done before, not the fault of the people. Don't blame the people for making the distinction between the fighting and the home fronts. Don't blame the press. You and you alone can make the link. In you both the office of Commander in Chief and President are combined.

With all respect, Mr. President, we ask you to reexamine your own organization, and then look at Eisenhower's, and the conclusion will be inescapable. Give air power its wings in your counsels, Mr. President. Advance its status and you will advance the bomber line to victory.

President's Veteran Plan Applauded

Congress Hails Soldier Program; All Ready to Help

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt's minimum 6-point program for veterans of World War II yesterday brought a rush of congressional indorsements amid every indication that Congress will raise the President's ante before it gets through with soldier legislation.

If history repeats, and Congress follows its traditional policy of aiding veterans of other wars, some legislators predicted it will be the White House in the end which applies the brakes on the inevitable bonus legislation.

"I'll bet 100 bonus bills are dropped into the hopper in the next term of Congress," said one House Ways and Means committeeman.

For the present, most members agreed with the President that the chief civil life concern of returning veterans will be jobs, job training and security. Toward this end legislative machinery will start churning in the fall.

President's Program

The President's minimum program: (1) Mustering-out pay to tide over the job-hunting period, (2) unemployment insurance if no job is found immediately, (3) education and trade training at Government cost, (4) full Social Security credit for all time spent in the armed forces, (5) liberalized provisions for hospitalization, rehabilitation and medical care, (6) pensions for disabled veterans.

Many of the points already are covered in legislation now pending

Restoration Of Fire Sirens Ordered by D.C.

Army Tells Mason Use on Trucks Was Never Prohibited

By Elwin Stouffer
Post Staff Writer

The District Commissioners were informed by the Army yesterday that use of sirens on fire trucks never have been prohibited, leading the Commissioners immediately to order sirens used again after admitting possible error "in our administrative judgment."

The controversy resulted from the collision of a hook-and-ladder truck with a commercial truck and trailer which took the life of Fireman Pvt. Everette Owens, driver of the truck, and injured six other persons. Blame has been tentatively placed on the insufficient warning of the fire apparatus bell.

The order for restoration of sirens climaxed an exchange of letters between Commissioner Guy Mason and Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis, commanding officer of the Washington Defense Area, who, in answer to a letter from Mason requesting permission to continue the use of sirens, stated:

"In response to your letter of July 28, which is the first specific request, either in writing or orally, received by this headquarters, you are informed that the Air-Raid Protection Regulations No. 1, issued by this headquarters do not prohibit the use of sirens on moving fire vehicles as long as confusion with air-raid signals does not result.

"You are authorized to use sirens on moving fire vehicles in answering fire calls. The use of sirens should be confined to short blasts at street intersections or in con-

20,000 OCD Recruits Needed

Thousands to March, 17 Bands To Participate in Parade Today

The biggest parade in Washington since President Roosevelt was inaugurated on March 4, 1933, will take place on Pennsylvania Avenue at 6:15 p. m. today in the opening gun of a campaign to enlist 20,000 additional workers in the civilian defense program.

Included among the 14,000 marchers for the first time on parade here will be WAACS, WAVES, SPARS and Women Marines. Military officials say this is the last time this year any contingent of the armed forces will be allowed to parade here.

Besides the women marchers soldiers, bluejackets and marines will be in the line of march as well as motorized artillery, tanks, anti-aircraft guns, searchlight batteries and other air-raid defense weapons.

Music will be provided by 17 bands instead of the eight originally secured. These bands will be from the Armed services, Washington and adjoining counties.

The parade will be divided into four sections: Military units, defense volunteers, patriotic organizations and civilian groups.

William Mileham, chief air raid warden, will lead the 6500 wardens expected to participate in the event. There also will be wardens from Montgomery, Prince Georges and Charles counties in Maryland and Arlington and Fairfax counties in Virginia.

Numerous organizations have contributed floats to the event, and several civilian organizations will have motorized contingents.

In order to permit District employes who wish to take part in the parade to have sufficient time to make the necessary preparations, they will be released from work at 3 p. m. under orders of the District Commissioners.

Following the parade the Air Raid wardens will assemble in front

Nazis Rush New Troops To Save Orel

Russian Guns, Cavalry Push Defenders Back For 6-Mile Gain

By Lynn Heinzerling
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Friday), July 30.—German units from as far as France and Germany rushed into the threatened Orel sector today as Red artillery pounded the countryside and Russian cavalry charged the weary German defenders, who were pushed back six miles and pried from 40 villages.

The Soviet midnight communique giving these new details said the Germans were snatching reinforcements from every available front in their determination to prevent a major debacle at Orel, a keystone in the entire German defenses.

The communique described them as "march battalions," a German expression meaning troops hurriedly organized and sent to the front before completing their full training.

3300 Germans Killed

More than 3300 Germans were killed in the Orel fighting yesterday as the battle burned brightly despite the rain and muck that sent troops floundering and splashing in attack and counterattack.

One Red army cavalry unit smashed through the enemy at three strongly fortified places north of Orel and the Germans ran, the communique, recorded here by the Soviet monitor, said.

Projectiles of massed big guns, one of Russia's most effective weapons in the present war, were described by a German war reporter as "cursed Russian artillery fire." The report, broadcast by Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press, said the Russians were "waging a war of attrition against us. They try to make us lose our nerve in this artillery duel. Shells are whistling over our heads. Our tank grenadiers stand up to it all."

Tanks, Planes Knocked Out

In the Belgorod direction south of Orel, weakened German morale was indicated by the Soviet communique. Red reconnaissance groups were conducting active operations when a large force of Germans, taking a raid by scouts to be an attack, began to flee. The scouts wiped out 60 Germans until the infantry arrived to help them in the unexpected victory and together they took over a populated place.

Thirty-eight more German tanks were knocked out and 63 planes

Offensive Stepped Up

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Navy undersea hunters have pulled down 10 Japanese ships and damaged four others in heavy blows at the enemy's far-stretched supply lines in the Pacific, an official war bulletin disclosed yesterday.

The new sinkings, none previously announced, boosted to 297 the number of Japanese ships which have been sunk or damaged by American submarines since the war began, according to Navy communiques.

Details Not Disclosed

All of the 14 new victims were either transports or cargo vessels of various types and sizes. When and where they were hit was not disclosed beyond the fact that the damage was done in the Pacific and Far East.

News of the sinkings, following closely word of new blows from the air against Japanese outposts at Kiska and Wake Island during the past week, hinted at the mounting energy of what President Roosevelt a few hours earlier described as the whittling down and pushing around the Japs are getting from the Aleutians to New Guinea.

Cargo Ship Toll Now 210

"United States submarines have reported the following results of operations against the enemy in the waters of these (Pacific and Far East) areas," the communique said:

"(a) Two large transports sunk.
"(c) Three medium-sized cargo vessels sunk.
"(d) Two medium-sized tankers sunk.
"(e) One small cargo vessel sunk.
"(f) One large cargo vessel damaged.
"(g) Three medium-sized cargo vessels damaged."

The report added that "these actions have not been announced in any previous Navy Department communiques."

Kentucky Accident Claims 20

50 Dead in Plane Crashes, Many Are Military Personnel

(Plane crashes announced yesterday took the lives of 50 persons, mostly military men and cadets. Details below.)

By the Associated Press

Bowling Green, Ky., July 29.—Charred bodies of 20 victims of an American Airlines transport plane which plowed into a field near Trammel, Ky., and burned last night were removed from the wreckage late today and brought here and to Nashville, Tenn., while the two lone survivors remained in a hospital here.

The crash, which took the lives of several military officers, important industrial leaders and a young mother and her baby, was being investigated by Civil Aeronautics Board officials and representatives of the airline.

S. K. Hoffman, of Williamsport, Pa., chief engineer of the Lycoming Division of American Aviation, Inc., and First Lieut. Glenn Fellows of Love Field, Tex., escaped through a kick-off window of the plane. Both were in the Bowling Green Hospital tonight.

Hoffman suffered a broken ankle and minor bruises and burns.

Fellows, who was given plasma treatment, was not in condition to talk. Hospital aides said the extent of his injuries had not yet been determined.

The plane, piloted by Capt. Harry A. Stiller, of Cleveland, Ohio, according to airlines officials, left Louisville, Ky., for Nashville, Tenn., at 9:54 p. m. yesterday and was last heard from at 10:30 p. m. at Smith Grove, Ky. The crash occurred shortly afterward.

An account of the crash was given by Hoffman, he said:

"We were coming in, evidently trying to land because of the weather. The pilot had cut the engine down but apparently saw he was in the wrong place and gave her the gun.

"We bounced a couple of times and stopped. Everybody was trying to get to the door. The lights went out . . . I pushed a window out and sprawled on the ground."

Hoffman said he had tried to open the plane door but failed, "then I tried the window but it was an oven inside and I couldn't make it."

The airline casualty list included the names of Mrs. Lucy Frickel Beasley, former airline stewardess and wife of Maj. Lynn Beasley, of Nashville and Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and their 11-months-old daughter, Joan.

Ernest Williams, a Kentucky highway patrolman, quoted Lieut. Fellows as saying a man had fallen across the door and the others piled on him in their efforts to get out after the plane had crash-landed. The body of the child was under that of a man in the doorway, indicating that he had attempted to carry the infant to

Praises House of Savoy

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 29.—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower asked the Italian people today to "cease immediately any assistance to German military forces in your country" as one price for "peace under honorable conditions."

"If you do this we will rid you of the Germans and deliver you from the horrors of war," he said in a broadcast which commended the Italians and the Royal House of Savoy for dropping Benito Mussolini . . ." the man who involved them in the war as a tool of Hitler and brought them to the verge of disaster."

(The Swiss telegraphic agency "published with reserve" a dispatch from the Italian border saying it had been learned in Rome that the Badoglio government is examining the conditions of peace sent by General Eisenhower."

Britain Declared "Too Drastic"

(The Rome radio, while apparently not replying directly to Eisenhower, took the line that the Allies were demanding too drastic terms for peace—perhaps a bargaining attempt to soften Allied demands.

(The broadcast complained that Britain wants a "Carthagenian peace"—a peace which would completely wipe out the defeated.

(Referring to Foreign Minister Anthony Eden's statement that Italy would not be allowed to retain all of her African possessions after honorable surrender, the broadcast said: "Please note that Mr. Eden's words were spoken three days after the disappearance of Mussolini and after the fall of the Fascist regime." This took the familar tact that now that fascism was gone, the Allies should reach terms other than unconditional surrender.

Offers Prisoner Exchange

(A Stefano news agency dispatch, also broadcast, said that unconditional surrender was "a formula which is empty of any political sense." This dispatch, which seemed to be arguing with the Allies for better peace terms, said that such demands are "a fanatic Anglo-Saxon mistake," adding: "Our enemies are showing they do not know us, and they ignore the Italians."

The Allied commander in chief also offered to return the "hundreds of thousands" of Italian prisoners taken in Tunisia and Sicily if all Allied prisoners "now in your hands are restored safely to us and not taken away to Germany."

The text of his broadcast follows:

"We commend the Italian people and the House of Savoy for ridding themselves of Mussolini, the man who involved them in the war as a

Italy Buzzes Over Proposal Of Eisenhower

Officially-Banned Text Is Distributed By the Underground

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland (Friday), July 30.—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's peace terms, officially banned from publication in Italy, quickly appeared today on the streets of the principal cities in mimeographed form.

Nothing else was discussed on streetcars and in cafes by the Italians, who were in the throes of a virtual social revolution.

Strikes continued in a number of important northern factories and fighting broke out in sectors north of Rome. These came after Italians found to their dismay that the new government of Marshal Badoglio had suddenly clamped on authoritarian measures and censorship that smacked of the ousted fascism.

Although the Badoglio government announced the arrest of all high Fascists, it also sharpened its orders to halt any political activity that would prove embarrassing.

Popular Leaders Arrested

But the arrests of popular leaders by army men was creating the feeling that the military were associating themselves with reactionary ideals.

Liberal and Leftist Italian political leaders were growing bitter and many were convinced that Badoglio created a sham drama of liberalism by allowing the press and the people two days of free expression in order to discover the government's secret opponents.

Ford, 80 Today, Sees Need For More Industry in Nation

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Staff Writer

Detroit, July 29.—Henry Ford, who will observe his eightieth birthday anniversary tomorrow in excellent health and as optimistic as ever, asserted today that business and industry "must build the physical basis of the good society."

And, he added, business and industrial effort must be developed around the philosophy that the only real benefit is the general benefit.

"There must be more and more industry," Ford said. "It is essential to political and economic freedom, and anything that hinders industry is harmful to the American ideal."

Ford comes to his eightieth birthday with heavier responsibilities than he has had in approximately a quarter century, but seemingly in the best health he has enjoyed at any time and thoroughly able to carry on indefinitely. After a lapse of nearly 25 years, he took over again the presidency and general managership of the Ford Co. following the death several weeks ago of his son, Edsel B. Ford.

"If I felt any better," he remarked, "I'd have to run."

Ford, who developed an initial investment of $28,000 four decades ago into an industrial empire that today has assets worth more than 800 million dollars, stressed that his company has been able to do "many things that needed to be done" because it has been "free from all stockholders and financial control."

"We never made money our main object," he said. "We regarded it as one of the tools, one of the by-products of business, and as a result

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 29.—American and Canadian troops have cracked the mountainous core of the Messina bridgehead to raise hopes tonight of a quick conquest of northeastern Sicily.

In a swift 12-mile overnight advance, the Americans captured the inland road junction of Nicosia at the base of the Axis triangle, and the Canadians overran the village of Agira, 7 miles to the southeast in a race for the western side of Mount Etna.

The seizure of the two towns threatened to collapse both Axis flanks, the northern one based at Stefano Di Camastro on the Tyrrhenian Sea, and the eastern anchor at Catania on the Ionian Sea.

(In Washington Undersecretary of War Patterson said the final conquest of Sicily was "a matter of days.")

Communications Cut

The two seizures were described as the most important strategical development of the last week, for they cut direct communications between the two Axis flanks, and threatened to cause a general German withdrawal from the Catania area where the British Eighth Army long has been tied down in trench warfare.

Fifty miles ahead of the Americans under Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., is Taromina, eastern coast city midway between Catania and Messina. The Seventh Army column is beyond Nicosia tonight, striking for the intermediate points of Troina and Randazzo above Mount Etna.

It is estimated that 40,000 Germans are spread between Catania and the north coast along the Mount Etna foothills. The capture

Nazis Reinforcing, Fighting With Fury

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 29 (AP).—The enemy still is reinforcing Sicily. German parachute battalions were among the arrivals and were reported to be resisting with a fanatical fury reminiscent of the Japanese. In one instance 250 were surrounded in a small area and more than 200 died before the remainder quit.

One prisoner grabbed a British officer's hand and bit it through, while another spat in the face of an intelligence officer. It was believed the Germans' almost maniacal tactics derived from their knowledge that Italy might be getting ready to make peace.

Sicilian Prelate Visions Peace Bid

Palermo, Sicily, July 26. (Delayed) (INS).—Cardinal Lavitrano of Palermo received Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., commander of the American Seventh Army, and told reporters he believes Italy soon will negotiate a separate peace. The prelate asserted that Sicilians regarded the overthrow of Mussolini as "a hopeful sign for quick cessation of hostilities."
